C. F. von Herrmann, United States meteorologist, Monday night said that two to four inches and more of rain fall in the Chattahoochee, Flint, Ocmulgee and Oconee watersheds within the past 24 hours would intensify flood conditions in south Georgia.He said he believed these rivers
would go higher in the next few days than they did last week. During last week's inundation highway traffic was paralyzed, railroad traffic was delayed,
and lowland farms and manufacturing plants were damaged by high water. The death list in last week's torrents was 10 lives, but the pre-warned residents were not expected to be caught unawares again.Meanwhile, the town of Newton, Ga., in the southwest corner of the state on the Flint river, was awaiting the crest of last week's flood.
The river had crept up to the edges of the lowland town of 300 population at 8 o'clock Monday night, and three families had been forced to move.
Jack Simmons, official of Public Utilities, Georgia corporation, gave this information to the Associated Press,
together with advice that several merchants had moved their stock to safe-flooding as the water continued to rise
at the rate of an inch and one-half an hour. No general exodus was likely, he said, in a conversation over power company lines and commercial wires, at least until the water had gone four feet higher.Meanwhile the Southern railway at Macon announced that crews were being dispatched to vulnerable spots in the expectation that the Ocmulgee and Oconee rivers would have a higher crest than last week. The Ocmulgee
at Macon rose 10 feet in 12 hours Monday to 23 feet, within 3 feet of last week's crest, and was still mounting. Lowland residents of East Macon were forced to desert the homes to which they had returned after last week's exodus.An advisory warning to Macon, Milledgeville, Hawkinsville, and Dublin, Ga., on the Ocmulgee and Oconee rivers, by the United States weather bureau at Macon, said:
"Precautions should be taken for stages close to flood stage and if the coming rain is heavy there will be above flood stages at Macon and Milledgeville."With his attention on the Chat-tahoocnee and Flint, Von Herrmann said flood conditions would obtain from West Point, Ga., on the Chattahoochee.
He expected the river to go to 22 feet
this week, as compared with 20 1/2 feet last week. He said similar conditions would prevail along the Flint, but that the spread of water would perhaps

Escapes.While scores of motor cars passed up and down Spring street in the early evening homeward rush, a lone bandit entered the Southern Railway freight offices at Spring and Nelson streets shortly after 5:30 o'clock Monday night, locked Cashier Hubert Sibley
into a vault, looted the safe of approximately $500 and escaped in the rain.Sibley was alone in his offices in the basement of the recently constructed annex to the Southern building,
when the bandit entered. The cashier said he was busy on his bookkeeping sheet and did not see the bandit approaching his cage.The bandit, described as being middle-aged and portly, directed the cashier to hold up his hands and to march into an open vault in the rear of the office. Sibley complied.After being imprisoned several minutes Sibley pounded loudly on the vault door and succeeded in attracting the attention of fellow workmen, who released him. He gave the police
a fairly good description of the bandit.
In questioning persons standing on the corner awaiting street cars, the police developed that the bandit was
a fairly good description of the bandit.

pert cracksmen who looted a safe at the Tennessee Egg company, 180 Spring street, of $10,000 over the week-end, had been obtained late Monday night by detectives investigating the robbery—the second of its kind suffered by the egg company in recent months. The loss was discovered by employees Monday morning
when they went to work.It is believed that the same eggs, following their visit to the Tennessee Egg company, moved next door to the A. C. Wooley company, dealers in feed and grain, and opened the safe by manipulating the combination. There was no money in this safe, which has

Monday morning, Sam Baker, operator

and locked in a large meat refrigerator. The door of the refrigerator was glazed, however, and the bandits had failed to take a pistol which Baker carried in his pocket. He whipped out the weapon and fired three times
through the door at the retreating negroes, who returned the volley, but fired wildly.Returning to his wagon after mak-

Midland, early Monday night, Andrew
Taylor, negro, 502 Humphrey street,

Silver yesterday afternoon, pinning
him underneath and almost drowning him.Smith was driving down the boulevard when the car got beyond his control, turned over three times and landed near the shore in 30 inches of water. Smith was wedged in the car head downwards and for the opportunity arrival of J. H. McKibbin, chief of police, would have drowned within a few minutes.COUNCIL TO PROBE

Corporation for Right
To Operate Here.Councilman Howard C. McCutchen, of the second ward, was named chairman of a special committee of city council Monday to investigate the petition of the Southern Natural Gas corporation for a franchise to operate in Atlanta. He said that he would call a meeting of the committee as soon as he could communicate with other members.Other members of the committee are: Councilman Charles L. Chose-wood, of the third; James L. Wells, of the eighth; Nelson Spratt, of the tenth, and William E. Saunders, of the tenth.Application of the gas company was filed with officials of the local government several days ago, and seeks to lay, maintain mains in the streets,
alleys, roads and highways of the city and to sell natural gas.Officials claim that if the petition is granted, they will be able to begin the sale of the product to Atlanta consumers by October 1, bringing the gas from the fields through large pipe lines.They declare the company is backed by a capital of $35,000,000 and that it is financially sound. When the petition for the franchise was sounded, Councilman McCutchen offered the resolution authorizing the appointment of the committee.City Attorney James L. Mayson was instructed to meet with the committee and advise it during its deliberations.Councilman Harry York, of the sixth ward, declared the city government should consider the feasibility of placing a gross receipt tax of from 5 to 10 per cent on the company. This will be before the committee for consideration as a possible way of increasing the city's revenue.POLICE SIGNALS

Temporary; Monday Uses
Half of Month's Quota.Tuesday morning will see at least a temporary halt in Atlanta's latest drenching downpour and the mercury
will experience a slight drop, following a day of almost constant precipitation.Monday brought with it approximately half of the rainfall due for the entire month and caused several minute floods within the city itself in addition to increasing the danger of high water on rivers south of Atlanta, according to the official prediction of
P. von Herrmann, local weather bureau chief.A total of 1.16 inches of rain had been recorded at the local station at 7 o'clock Monday morning and by 1 o'clock in the afternoon 1.13 inches had been added to this. With the rain continuing, Mr. von Herrmann stated that by this morning there was little doubt that half of the March quota of 5.31 inches would be on the books.Macon, Montgomery, Little Rock, Meridian, Mobile and New Orleans all reported rain Monday morning in amounts ranging from one inch to slightly more than two inches and additional reports from Macon in the afternoon stated that the downpour was still in progress there.The river forecast of the local office states that another marked rise is expected in the Chattahoochee, but that the Flint river would not be affected.
The Apalachicola will remain above flood stages until March 15, is the prediction.The Washington forecast calls for additional precipitation towards the latter part of the week, below normal temperatures for Tuesday, rising temperatures for two days and then colder again.GEORGIA AND S. C.
NOT REPRESENTED
IN HOOVER PARADEWashington, March 4.—(AP)—Lack
of official representation kept South Carolina and Georgia from taking a very active part in the official ceremonies of the inauguration of Herbert Hoover here today, but did not deter hundreds of South Carolinians and Georgians from enjoying the huge parade.A marching club from Georgia was in the parade, but aside from that group the state was otherwise unrepresented in the march. The inaugural committee was keenly disappointed because Governor Hardman, of Georgia, had found it impossible to attend. His presence in Washington last year when the Stephens monument was unveiled and the striking appearance of his horse guard is well remembered in the national capital.HOOVER SETTLES
TO VEXING TASKSMany Problems Confront
New Executive Left From Past Two Administrations.

BY W. B. RAGSDALE.

Associated Press Staff Writer.

Washington, March 4.—(AP)—President Hoover, the glamor and glory of inauguration past, looked ahead tonight to tasks that have vexed two administrations and press heavily upon his own for early execution.Firm relief, tariff revision, more effective prohibition enforcement, disposition of Muscle Shoals and railroad consolidation are foremost among the domestic problems that await solution.In the field of foreign affairs there are further naval limitations, steps looking to American membership in the world court; the promotion generally of better relations with the Latin American republics and the question of American marine occupation of Nicaragua.Agriculture and tariff are to occupy the attention of a special session of congress which is to be called for mid-April, but consideration of other subjects in the domestic field will go over until the regular session, except that the president will appoint a national commission to study prohibition and the processes of general law enforcement.

* Waits for Stimson.

None of the international questions
is pressing at the moment and meantime there is to be a realignment of the diplomatic service, customary with the changes of administrations, but even that will await the arrival here
of Henry L. Stimson, his new secretary of state, who is on his way home from Manila.Mr. Hoover will take his place at the presidential desk in executive offices at 9 a. m. tomorrow and immediately will plunge into a mass of work,
for he already has familiarized himself with many of the details of his office.One of his first tasks will be to transmit the names of his cabinet selections to the senate which will consider them at noon tomorrow to receive them.Whether the president will submit the names of Andrew W. Mellon, as treasury secretary, and James J.
Davis, as labor secretary, who are holders of the Coolidge administration still was undetermined tonight, but with the probabilities that they would not be sent in with the other eight as they once have been confirmed.

GAINS ADHERENTS
IN MANY STATESNine Governors Opposing President, Revolutionists Claim; Gil Says Majority of Army Is Loyal.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Behind the veil of censorship in Mexico City last night President Portes Gil and his loyal generals laid plans to subdue the revolution while the revolting military commanders in the states of Vera Cruz and Sonora consolidated their positions and claimed a total of nine state won to their cause.Governor Fausto Topete, of Sonora, proclaimed complete religious liberty
under the rebel government, which undoubtedly would strengthen the cause in Jalisco and other western states which long have resisted the stern control of the government. He also declared that the revolution was directed against former President
Calles and demanded that he leave
Mexico.The central government at Mexico
City said that the revolt was confined to two states. Rebel leaders, however, claimed the entire west coast as far south as Colima, against which their forces were marching, the north central states of Durango and Coahuila, as well as the southern state of Oaxaca and Vera Cruz.President Portes Gil declared that his government had the situation in hand and would crush the movement which was led by what he called a dissatisfied military-political group.
To effect this he had as Secretary of War General Calles, recalled from retirement to lend his strong hand.No reports of actual conflict were received at any point. Both sides apparently were busy consolidating positions and seeking by peaceful persuasion or a simple show of force to win others to their cause. Troop movements were reported on both the east and west coasts and another concentration at Monterey indicated the possibility of combat in that section.
The United States government was watching the situation but had taken
no action.GIL ADMITS ANOTHER STATE HAS REVOLTED.Mexico City, March 4.—(AP)—Provisional President Emilio Portes Gil,
after a day spent in consolidating federal forces to crush the revolution,
admitted tonight that a third state, Coahuila, had revolted against the central government.At the same time he declared that the revolution headed by General
Jesus Maria Aguirre in Vera Cruz,
General Francisco Manzo in Sonora and General J. Gonzalo Escobar in Coahuila was the most unjustified
any revolt in Mexico in recent times.
"These unfaithful leaders," he said,
"have come into open rebellion with
the purpose of establishing a military dictatorship. They are actuated by no noble ideas but their movement is nothing more than an idea of personal gain."The president said the majority of the army was loyal supporting his government and that the entire nation disapproved of the rebellion.TROOPS ARE HEADED FOR MEXICO CITY.Vera Cruz, Mexico, March 4.—(AP)— Revolutionary troops today began moving southward from Vera Cruz, in the direction of Mexico City.It was stated that their progress would be slow because of the mountainous territory through which they must pass.Meanwhile quiet and order prevails
in Vera Cruz with the state in charge of General Jesus Maria Aguirre.REPORT SAYS VILLAREAL
HAS JOINED INSURGENTS.Laredo, Texas, March 4.—(AP)— Unconfirmed reports here today said that General Antonio Villareal, an announced candidate for the presidency of Mexico, had rebelled and seized Monterrey, Mexico, about 150 miles from Laredo.The reports, which were received over a private wire from Monterey,
added that General Juan Andrea, Al-amazon divisional general in charge of federal troops in the state of Coahuila, was in a conflict with rebels near Monterrey.Advices as to the seizure of Monterey by General Villareal, who had been a political exile from Mexico until recently, did not say whether the rebels had met resistance.As yet no clashes between loyal troops and the insurgents have been reported. Because of the great distance of most of the affected states
from Mexico City, with the exception of Vera Cruz, fighting is not thought likely for some time. If it comes,
it probably will be in Vera Cruz.
During the day the rebels consolidated their position along the northern boundary of Sonora, taking command of the three principal border cities which are key ports of entry to the United States.PRESIDENT PLANS

Special Session of Congress for Farm and Tarriff Legislation.Washington, March 4.—(AP)—Herbert Hoover entered upon the presidency today with a solemn promise to enforce the prohibition and all other laws to the extent of his abilities,
and with a declaration that he covered for his administration a record of having further contributed to advance
the cause of peace among nations.In terse language he told his fellow countrymen that the measure of success the government could attain in law enforcement would depend upon the moral support which they extended.The "duty of citizens to support the laws of the land is co-equal with the duty of their government to enforce the laws which exist," he said. "No greater national service can be given by men and women of good will, who,
I know, are not unmindful of the responsibilities of citizenship—than that they should, by their example, assist in stamping out crime and outlawry
by refusing participation in and condemning all transactions with illegal liquor."If citizens do not like a law their duty as honest men and women is to discourage its violation; their duty as honest men and women is to discourage its violation; their right is openly to work for its repeal.Name Commission.
With a hope of improving present conditions, President Hoover announced he would appoint a commission to make a searching investigation of the whole question of law enforcement and to make such recommendations
for reorganization of the administration of federal laws and court procedure "as may be found desirable."In the copy of his prepared address
he added that in the meantime it was essential to transfer from the treasury to the justice department a large part of the enforcement activities.
There was some confusion whether he read that sentence in his speech.
On behalf of the white house subsequently it was stated that the address was stated that if he had omitted it in his hurried recital of the address, it was stated in which the address was delivered, it was purely an oversight, and that the copy as written and made public expressed precisely his views on that subject.The chief executive devoted even more of his address to world peace

MRS. MARY JANE WADE PASSES AT AGE OF 104

Pioneer Southern Woman
Takes With Her 100 Years of Reminiscences.

More than a century of reminiscences were carried away with the passing of Mrs. Mary Jane Wade, who died Sunday night at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. J. D. Fincher, 910 South Pryor street. Funeral services for the pioneer southern woman, who spent the last 10 years of her life in Atlanta, will be held at 10 o'clock this morning and interment will be in the family grave at Tilton. The Rev. Joe Cumbley, of Rome, will officiate.

Mrs. Wade was 104 years old. She had counted 24 presidents of the United States inaugurated during her lifetime, the end coming on the eve of the inauguration of the twenty-fifth. In her reminiscences of the long period of American history witnessed during her life, she spoke most frequently of having seen veterans from seven American wars, beginning with the revolutionary war and including the world war.

Until 20 months ago, when she suffered a broken hip that confined her to a chair for the remainder of her life, Mrs. Wade had known hardly a single day of illness, though she put in many days of strenuous work in the pioneering stage of the south. She was born in Greenville county, South Carolina, where, as a child, she helped her mother on the family plantation home make buttons and other articles for which there was no machinery at that time. During the civil war days, while her late husband fought in the Confederate army, she worked with her fingers, weaving from Monday morning to Saturday night, then cooked a week's provisions on Sunday to last during her work that brought her $1 for six days' weaving.

But Mrs. Wade knew many tales of the brighter side of pioneering life.

and these she often related to her great grandchildren and grandchildren who gathered about her. Sometimes that were dear to her included a $7 bill printed during the revolutionary war and a carefully preserved biscuit, taken from the first pan she baked for her husband in 1801, when he left to join his company in the war. Her husband, Henry S. Wade, died 20 years ago. Mrs. Wade will be buried beside him today.

In addition to her daughter in Atlanta, Mrs. Wade is survived by another daughter, Mrs. N. J. Fincher, of Wetmore, Ala., and a son, W. D. Wade, of Ball Ground.

Scenes Attendant Upon the Inauguration of Herbert Hoover as Thirtieth President

Inaugural Parade Seen As One of Most Brilliant In Twenty or More Years

Drizzling Rain Fails To Dampen Spirits of Thousands Viewing Inspiring Event.

BY ALFRED P. RECK.
United News Staff Correspondent.

Washington, March 4.—(United News.)—In a drizzling rain, which dampened their gay trappings but not their spirits, an inaugural parade of representative Americans passed by President Hoover today.

The new president stood in a glass-enclosed reviewing stand before his new home, the white house, and watched the thousands of his countrymen file past.

By land and by air they came to pay honor and welcome to the Iowa boy who fought his way to the highest position his country could give him.

Flags, some of which bore the marks of battle, dipped on land in brilliant salutes to the president while overhead roaring dirigibles waggle their rudders and dipped over the reviewing stand.

The giant dirigible, Los Angeles, queen of the American air fleet, bowed her silver head to her new commander-in-chief.

A squadron of airplanes hummed through the mist and falling rain, circled the reviewing stand and passed into the fog.

Seated with President Hoover and Vice President Charles Curtis were Mrs. Hoover, Mrs. Edward Gann, sister of the vice president, some of the members of the new cabinet and invited guests.

Flanking them on both sides were members of the diplomatic corps with cocked hats and high heels.

Most Brilliant.

In spite of the rain, the inaugural parade was the most brilliant the capital has seen in 20 years, perhaps longer. It was colorful, interesting and inspiring.

At times it brought broad grins to the face of the new president, sometimes deep thought again light amusement and once or twice sorrow.

The fleeting expressions on Mr. Hoover's face presented a true interpretation of the spirit of the parade.

Most of the time the new president here a look of deep concentration. His mouth was set in a straight line as if the unrolling pageant which moved past him for fully two hours brought realization of the serious duties ahead of him in the next few years.

Vice President Curtis appeared more amused than anything else. He rocked back and forth on his feet in time with the rollicking music of the bands, he waved happily at all of the delegations and smiled continuously.

Troops of the regular army swung past the reviewing stand at exactly 3 p. m. Snappy commands of "eyes left" turned the faces of the soldiers to their commander-in-chief.

Every national flag that passed brought President Hoover to his feet and salute with his hat over his left breast.

The infantry filed past, their white gloves keeping perfect time, then came the engineers and the cavalry, with a mounted band, yellow-gloved and playing the "Yellow Legs" marching song of the cavalry.

Machine Guns.

Tally looking machine guns, snouts turned skyward, yellow brass cartridges contrasting to the white ammunition belts, passed by. Mr. Hoover gazed at them curiously.

Then the graceful Los Angeles floated through the fog. Her nose dipped to the president's stand and she appeared to slide through the air sideways. Four blimps with trailing radio antenna followed closely, all with their noses toward the president.

Mr. Hoover glanced up for a minute and then to street again as the red-coated marine band, 100 strong, marched by. A complete regiment of "Devil Dogs" followed, America's clean-up men in times of international difficulties.

The president watched them closely and solemnly. His profile stood sharply in contrast to the grey, western sky.

Then came more soldiers, sailors and coast guardsmen. A huge anti-aircraft gun mounted on a tractor passed. Mr. Hoover stood up. Always interested in mechanical things, he studied it closely and followed it with his eyes until it passed out of sight around a bend in the avenue.

Three-year-old Peggy Ann, granddaughter of the president, raised her blonde head over her grandfather's knees. Mr. Hoover leaned down and spoke to her. Peggy Ann smiled, more interested in her grandfather than in the parade.

More bands, more soldiers, more marines passed in an apparently endless stream.

Work in Parade.

A shiny, new automobile carried Dr. Hubert Work, chairman, and officers of the republican national committee, the men who directed the campaign which swept the new president into office.

Mr. Hoover and Mr. Curtis sat down and waved to the men who were largely responsible for their elections.

Then came the governors of states—27 of them—and their military aides and troops. They passed by in order of their state's entrance into the union.

Pennsylvania brought the first cheers with an imposing array of 100 battle flags, carried by the Keystone troops in the world's war.

They had seen action at the Marne, in the Argonne and other battles until the end of the war.

Mr. Hoover gazed in silent appreciation at the colorful troops from Connecticut, the governor's foot guards in their dripping bearskin hats, the ever-ready horse guards, yellow plumed and white belted.

Then came the governor's staff, the men who succeeded his father a snap salute, as becomes a major on the governor's staff.

JOHN COOLIDGE, son of the former president, looked on with interest.

Most of the time the new president here a look of deep concentration. His mouth was set in a straight line as if the unrolling pageant which moved past him for fully two hours brought realization of the serious duties ahead of him in the next few years.

Vice President Curtis appeared more amused than anything else. He rocked back and forth on his feet in time with the rollicking music of the bands, he waved happily at all of the delegations and smiled continuously.

United News Staff Correspondent.

Washington, March 4.—(United News.)—Herbert Hoover took his solemn oath as president of the United States today while thousands of American citizens, men and women, stood before him, silent, in front of the steps of the nation's capitol.

A drizzling rain dripped down. The throngs raised umbrellas. But Herbert Hoover, a serious, solemn figure in the midst of all the ceremony, stood bareheaded and let the water fall upon his close-cut hair as he spoke a distinct "I do" when the oath was read.

Then he bowed low and slowly raised the open Bible to his lips and kissed it, while all the thousands reaching far out to the borders of the capitol grounds were so silent that even the soft patter of the light rain seemed noisy.

The new president of the United States was the solemn, sober figure of that whole gathering. Near him stood Calvin Coolidge, smiling his quiet little smile, plainly light hearted. He was a slight but agile figure who had shifted the tremendous burden of responsibility of the presidency to the broad shoulders of Herbert Hoover, and the weight already was bearing down with a relentless, solemn pressure upon the nation's new chief executive.

Overcast Skies.

The day had begun with overcast skies and a chill wind blowing just briskly enough to make the many banners of the capitol wave gently. By 9 a. m. the people were coming. An hour later there were thousands around the capitol and by noon the whole plaza which fronts the capitol and lies between the house and senate office buildings was closely packed.

Many hundreds stood upon the roofs and cornices of the government buildings, looking down upon the ceremony.

A little after 11 a. m. Calvin Coolidge and Mrs. Coolidge, and Mr. and Mrs. Hoover came out of the white house. Mrs. Coolidge was dressed in grey with a fox fur neckpiece and carried sweet peas and orchids. Mrs. Hoover wore a black wrap. She and her husband were smiling.

As the white house car rolled away from the building where the Coolidges had lived so long, Mrs. Coolidge turned and waved a farewell to the searons who stood watching the final departure of a mistress they loved. At the white house gates the car was stopped and Mrs. Coolidge shook hands with the policeman on guard, assuring him that some day she would see him again.

Acclaim Party.

Crowds on Pennsylvania avenue acclaimed the executive party as it sped toward the capitol. The Coolidges were acknowledged with the doffing of hats and a pretty gesture from Mrs. Coolidge.

Arriving at the capitol, the Hoovers and the Coolidges were escorted to the senate chamber. There, with the diplomatic corps gathered in the full radiance of its formal dress, high strung and navy officers in full uniform, and the members of the senate and the house, Charles Curtis was given the oath as vice president, Charles Hughes, who for four years has been the vice president, spoke briefly, reiterating in a brief paragraph the desire he voiced so sentimentally on his inauguration four years ago, to have the senate rules revised. Curtis followed with a pledge to carry out the duties of his office and a hope that the work of the senate, over which for the next four years he will preside, would be fruitful.

New senators were sworn in, while the executive party, with the diplomatic corps and high officials, awaited the time to go to the capitol steps for the inauguration of the new president. He chatted with several friends. He smiled and seemed glad to be free of his responsibilities. Mr. Hoover quietly acknowledged greetings and spent much time in thought.

At 12:57 p. m., Mr. Coolidge and Mr. Hoover came to the capitol steps while the crowd, which could hardly see them over four rails and the mass of radio instruments, cheered. The Marine band, which had kept crowd listening to patriotic and typically American airs during the morning, struck up the strains of "Hail to the Chief."

Cabinets There.

Mr. Coolidge was seated upon the left with his retiring cabinet members. Mr. Hoover, with the new cabinet, was upon the right. The members of the supreme court, wearing their black robes over top coats because of the cold, and with black skull caps to protect their heads, came to the platform. The diplomatic corps, led by Sir Esme Howard, the British ambassador and dean of the corps, in their colorful dress, and the army and navy officers, formed a brilliant background to the sombre attire of the nation's executive offices. Mrs. Coolidge and Mrs. Hoover were delayed. Mr. Hoover figured nervously until they arrived together.

At precisely 1:07 p. m., Chief Justice William Howard Taft stepped into the bay which formed the center of a small, white pavilion erected on the capitol steps. He nodded to Mr. Hoover, who came quickly forward. He was wearing a black coat over his morning dress. His head was bare. His manner was serious. A hush fell over the crowd which nestled under a canopy formed by thousands upon thousands of red, blue, grey and black umbrellas, stretching to the limits of the capitol plaza.

"I do solemnly swear," spoke the chief justice in a clear, slow voice, as Mr. Hoover looked squarely at him, his broad shoulders swaying ever so little, "that I will faithfully execute the office of president of the United States and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect and defend the constitution of the United States."

"I do," responded Mr. Hoover, firmly and slowly. His hand was resting upon the Bible opened at the Sermon on the Mount.

Reads Proverbs.

Charles Elmore Cropley, clerk of the supreme court, who was holding the Bible, pressed it towards Mr. Hoover. After turning to the 29th chapter of Proverbs in which the 18th verse had been marked the verse read:

"Where there is no vision the people perish but he that keepeth the law, happy is he."

Mr. Hoover reached out for the Book, bowed slowly and with much reverence, raised it to his lips, and slowly kissed its open page, upon the verse marked. Then he slowly straightened again, and shook hands with the chief justice. Then he advanced to the speakers bay and began his inaugural address.

By that time the rain was falling with more severity and at an angle which permitted it to drift in upon the bare head of Mr. Hoover. He gave the drizzle no heed as he launched into his address.

The first applause came with his tribute to Mr. Coolidge and the accomplishments of the Coolidge administration, but it was restrained applause. The figure of the sober, thoughtful man who was speaking seemed to bring a hush upon the crowd.

Again there was restrained applause and brief stamping of feet as he spoke of law enforcement and the duty of the people to heed the statutes of their land. As he continued through his 30 minutes speaking, from time to time there was some applause, but never a wild ovation.

The crowd, estimated anywhere from 25,000 to 50,000 people, remained despite the rain as towards the end of Mr. Hoover's speech, the down-pour increased and passed beyond a mere drizzle. Mr. Hoover shook the water from his face and head and quickened his delivery just a little.

Finally he reached the end. "In the presence of my countrymen," he pronounced, slackening the pace of his delivery once more, and giving a thoughtful glance out upon the multitude standing before him, "mindful of the solemnity of this occasion and knowing what the task involves, I beg your tolerance, your aid and your cooperation."

"I ask the help of Almighty God in this service to my country to which you have called me."

There was a brief wave of applause. The marine band struck up the spirited strains of "Hail to the Chief." The first time it had been played for Mr. Hoover. He returned to his seat. There was a brief moment of congratulation. Then the official party arose and once more the marine band played "Hail to the Chief," the last time it would be played for Mr. Coolidge.

Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge, with two secret service men, stepped into a waiting car and were whisked away to the union station.

Coolidge Speaks.

There was a goodly crowd at the station to say farewell to the retiring chief executive. He hesitated long enough to say:

"I take this occasion to say goodbye to all of you and to express the hope that you will all enjoy the future as much as I have the last eight years."

While the train was carrying Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge to a place of quiet freedom and rest, Mr. and Mrs. Hoover were being escorted by a squadron of cavalry, amid much pomp and dignity, back up Pennsylvania avenue to the white house, through streets lined with people who acclaimed them.

The Hoovers retired to their private suite. During the morning, the last of their furniture had been moved into the building from their former home. It included the first baby's crib to enter the white house in many years, a tiny bed for Peggy and Ann Hoover, the little daughters of Herbert Hoover, Jr., and wife, Mr. Hoover's office had been prepared for the new president, marked him also as he passed again to private life. It was in his eyes and bearing as he bearing as he right on the way to the capitol, nodding and waving to

Coolidge Speeds North As Private Individual; Glare of Publicity Gone

Leaves Tumultuously Joyous Capital Behind as Family Goes to New England Home.

Springfield, Mass., March 5.—(Tuesday.)—(AP)—Former President Calvin Coolidge returned to his home state of Massachusetts early today. The train bearing his social entourage was 40 minutes late, arriving here at 12:11 a. m.

Two cars, the one occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge, and another containing newspapermen, were detached from the Montpelier Express here and run to Northampton, 15 miles away, as a special train. The former president and his wife will remain aboard until 8:30 this morning when they will be officially welcomed. The special left here at 12:31 a. m.

Washington, March 4.—(AP)—Calvin Coolidge was speeding northward tonight, a private again in the vast army of American citizenry.

Behind him in Washington the stir and joyous tumult that welcomed his successor to the presidency ebbed and flowed with the passing hours.

But the man at whom the finger of destiny pointed with such tragic mutes in the dark, small hours of an August morning six years ago was done with all that. His work was finished. His eyes were fixed on the peaceful sanctuary that awaits him in New England. He was going home.

Under all the noisy greetings to the new president, waving in and out of the bright fabric of a nation had prepared to acclaim its chosen leader, ran a voiceless message of Godspeed from the people of America to a retiring chief of state who had been tireless in the performance of his duties to the end.

Works to the Last.

For Mr. Coolidge clung to the rule of doing each day the work of the day to the last. An hour before he joined President-elect Hoover for the swift ride down Pennsylvania avenue to the capitol, he had been in the cavalry escort that was leading the way for him out of public life, the retiring president was kidding away at his desk at the white house. The same calm, almost inscrutable serenity that marked him in that August morning when he stood in a lamplighted room of his father's home in Plymouth, N. H., to make his first oath of service as president, marked him also as he passed again to private life. It was in his eyes and bearing as he bearing as he right on the way to the capitol, nodding and waving to

But even after he had left the capitol, Mr. Coolidge was to know the more tribute to his national service before he saw the last of Washington. Thousands were packed all about the depot and overran the train platforms to bid him farewell.

A radio microphone was brought to him on the rear platform and over it he made his own adieu to public life, wishing "good-bye" to all those who might be listening.

COOLIDGE WILL WRITE FOR THREE MAGAZINES

New York, March 4.—(AP)—Curiosity as to what Calvin Coolidge would do on returning to private life was satisfied at least partly today by announcements that contributions from his pen would appear in three magazines, and that he had received a request for a conference on an offer of a $25,000 annual retainer fee plus a dollar a word for material for an encyclopedia.

The Ladies Home Journal in Philadelphia announced that the former president had written three articles on "Promoting Peace," which will appear in the April, May and June issues. The articles, said an announcement from Loring A. Schuler, editor of the magazine, elaborate on preparation, limitation and renunciation—United States as "the only practical principles that have ever been proposed" in Mr. Coolidge's own words.

Mr. Coolidge already had written the first article of what is to be a series for the magazine.

HOOVER INDICTS FAILURE OF CONSTITUTION IN INAUGURAL ADDRESS

Pledges Law Enforcement And Asks Citizens' Aid

Washington, March 4.—(AP)—Here is the text of the inaugural address of President Herbert Hoover:

This occasion is not alone the administration of the most sacred oath which can be assumed by an American citizen. It is a dedication and consecration under God to the highest office in service of our people. I assume this trust in the humility of knowledge that only through the guidance of almighty providence can I hope to discharge its ever increasing burdens.

It is keeping with tradition through our history that I should express simply and directly the opinions which I hold concerning some of the matters of present importance.

Our Progress. If we survey the situation of our nation both at home and abroad, we find many satisfactions. We find many causes for concern. We have emerged from the losses of the great war and the reconstruction following it with increased vitality and strength. From this strength we have contributed to the recovery and progress of the world. What America has done has given renewed hope and courage to all who have faith in government by the people. In the large view, we have reached a higher degree of comfort and security than ever existed before in the history of the world.

Through liberation from widespread poverty we have reached a higher degree of individual freedom than ever before. The devotion to duty and courage for our institutions are deep and sincere. We are steadily building a new race—a new civilization great in its own attainments. The influence and high purposes of our nation are respected among the peoples of the world. We aspire to distinction in the world, but to a distinction based upon confidence in our sense of justice as well as our accomplishments within our own borders and in our own lives. For wise guidance in this great period of recovery the nation is deeply indebted to Calvin Coolidge.

But all this majestic advance should not obscure the constant dangers from which self-government must be safeguarded. The strong man must at all times be alert to the attack of insidious disease.

Failure of System of Justice. The most malign of all these dangers today is disregard and disobedience of law. Crime is increasing. Confidence in right and speedy justice is decreasing. I am not prepared to believe that this indicates any decay in the moral fiber of the American people. I am not prepared to believe that it indicates an impotence of the federal government to enforce its laws.

It is only in part due to the additional burdens imposed upon our judicial system by the eighteenth amendment. The problem is much wider than that. Many influences have been increasingly complicated and weakened abiding citizens is supplying the rewards and stimulating crime.

I have been selected by you to execute and enforce the laws of the country. I propose to do so to the extent of my abilities, but the measure of success that the government shall attain will depend upon the moral support which you, as citizens, extend. The duty of citizens to support the laws of the land is equal with the duty of their government to enforce the laws which exist.

No greater national service can be given by men and women of good will who, I know, are not unmindful of the responsibilities of citizenship—than that they should, by their example, assist in stamping out crime and outlawry by refusing participation in and condemning all transactions with illegal liquor. Our whole system of self-government will crumble either if officials elect what laws they will enforce or citizens elect what laws they will support.

Those who have a true understanding of America know that we have no desire for territorial expansion for economic or other domination of other peoples.

We not only desire peace with the world, but to see peace maintained throughout the world.

Peace can be contributed to by respect for our ability in defense.

The animosities of elections should have no place in our government for government must concern itself alone with the common weal.

Ill-considered remedies for our faults bring only penalties after them.

Ours is a land rich in resources; stimulating in its glorious beauty; filled with millions of happy homes; blessed with comfort and opportunity.

No country is more loved by its people. I have an abiding faith in their capacity, integrity and high purpose.

effect high purposes in public welfare. It is an advance toward the highest conception of self-government. Self-government does not and should not imply the use of political agencies alone. Progress is born of cooperation in the community—not from governmental restraints. The government should assist and encourage these movements of collective self help.

Business has, by cooperation, made great progress in the advancement of service, in stability, in regularity of employment and in the correction of its own abuses. Such progress, however, can continue only so long as business manifests its respect for law.

There is an equally important field of cooperation by the federal government with the multitude of agencies, state, municipal and private, in the systematic development of those processes which directly affect public health, recreation, education and the home. We have need further to perfect the means by which government can be adapted to human service.

Education. Although education is primarily a responsibility of the states and local communities, and rightly so, yet the nation as a whole is vitally concerned in its development everywhere to the highest standards and to complete universality. Self-government can succeed only through an instructed electorate. Our objective is not simply to overcome illiteracy. The nation has marched far beyond that. The more complex the problems of the nation become, the greater is the need for more and more advanced instruction. Moreover, as our numbers increase and as our life expands with science and invention, we must discover more and more leaders from every walk of life. We cannot hope to succeed in directing this increasingly complex civilization unless we can draw all the talent of leadership from the whole people. One civilization after another has been wrecked upon the attempt to secure sufficient leadership from a single group or class. If we would prevent the growth of class distinctions and would constantly refresh our leadership with the ideals of our people, we must draw constantly from the general mass. The full opportunity for every boy and girl to rise through the selective processes of education can alone secure to us this leadership.

Public Health. In public health the discoveries of science have opened a new era. Many sections of our country and many groups of our citizens suffer from diseases the eradication of which are mere matters of administration and moderate expenditure. Public health service should be as fully organized and as universally incorporated into our governmental system as is public health in the private sector. It is a splendid field in reduction of suffering and promotion of human happiness.

World Peace. The United States fully accepts the profound truth that our own progress, prosperity and peace are interwoven with the progress, prosperity and peace of all humanity. The world is at peace. The dangers to continuation of this peace today are largely the fear and suspicion which still haunt the nations. No suspicion or fear can be rightly directed toward our country.

Those who have a true understanding of America know that we have no desire for territorial expansion, for economic or other domination of other peoples. Such purposes are repugnant to the American people. Superior officials seem to find no destiny for our abounding increase in population, in wealth and power except that of imperialism. They fail to see that the American people are engaged in the building for themselves of a new economic system, a new social system, a new political system—all of which are characterized by aspirations of freedom of opportunity and thereby are the negation of imperialism. They fail to realize that because of our abounding prosperity our youth are pressing more and more into institutions of learning; that our people are seeking a larger vision through art, literature, science and travel; that they are moving toward stronger moral and spiritual life—that from these things our sympathies are broadening beyond the bounds of our nation and race toward their true expression in a real brotherhood of man. They fail to see that the idealism of America will lead it to no narrow or selfish channel, but inspire it to do its full share as a nation toward the advancement of civilization. It will do that not by mere declaration but by taking a practical part in supporting all useful international undertakings.

We not only desire peace with the world, but to see peace maintained throughout the world. We wish to advance the reign of justice and reason toward the extinction of force.

The recent treaty for the renunciation of war as an instrument of national policy sets an advanced standard in our conception of the relations of nations. Its acceptance should pave the way to greater limitation of armament, the offer of which we sincerely extend to the world. But its full realization also implies a greater and greater perfection in the instrumentalities for pacific settlement of controversies between nations. In the creation and use of these instrumentalities we should support every sound method of conciliation, arbitration and judicial settlement. American statesmen were among the first to propose and they have constantly urged upon the world the establishment of a tribunal for the settlement of controversies of a justiciable character. The permanent court of international justice in its major purpose is thus peculiarly identified with American ideals and with American statesmanship. No more potent instrumentality for this purpose has ever been conceived and no other is practicable of establishment.

The reservations placed upon our adherence should not be misinterpreted. The United States seeks by these reservations no special privilege or advantage, but only to clarify its position in advisory opinions and other matters which are subsidiary to the major purpose of the court. The way should, and I believe will, be found by which we may take our proper place in a movement so fundamental to the progress of peace.

Our people have determined that we should make no political engagements such as membership in the League of Nations, which may commit us in advance as a nation to become involved in the settlements of controversies between other countries. They adhere to the belief that the independence of America from such obligations increases its ability and availability for service in all fields of human progress.

I have lately returned from a journey among our sister republics of the hemisphere. I have received unbounded hospitality and courtesy as their expression of friendliness to our country. We are held by particular bonds of sympathy and comradery with them. They are each of them building a racial character and a culture which is an impressive contribution to human progress. We wish only for the maintenance of their independence, the growth of their stability and their prosperity. While we have had wars in the western hemisphere yet on the whole the record is in encouraging contrast with that of other parts of the world. Fortunately of the new world is largely free from the inheritance of centuries of distrust which have so troubled the old world. We should keep it so.

It is impossible, my countrymen, to speak of peace without profound emotion in thousands of homes in America, in millions of homes around the world, there are vacant chairs. It would be a shameful confession of our unworthiness if we did not deplore that we have abandoned the hope for which all these men died. Surely civilization is old enough, surely mankind is mature enough, so that we ought in our own lifetime to find a way to permanent peace. Abroad, to west and east, are nations whose sons mingled their blood with the blood of our sons on the battlefields of the world. These nations have contributed to our race, to our culture, to our knowledge and our progress. From one of them we derive our very language and from many of them the genius of our institutions. Their desire for peace is as deep and sincere as our own.

Peace can be contributed to by respect for our ability in defense. Peace can be promoted by the limitation of arms and by the creation of the instrumentalities for pacific settlement of controversies. But it will become a reality only through self-restraint and active effort in friendliness and helpfulness. I covet for this administration a record of having further contributed to advance the cause of peace.

Party Responsibilities. In our form of democracy the expression of the popular will can be effected only through the instrumentalities of political parties. We maintain party government not to promote intolerant partisanship but to cause opportunity must be given for expression of the popular will, and organization provided for the execution of its mandates and for accountability of government to the people. It follows that the government both in the executive and the legislative branches must carry out in good faith the platforms upon which the party was entrusted with power. But the government is that of the whole people; the party is the instrument through which policies are determined and men chosen to bring them into being. The animosities of elections should have no place in our government. Self-government must concern itself alone with the common weal.

Special Session of the Congress. Action upon some of the proposals upon which the republican party was returned to power, particularly further agricultural relief and limited changes in the tariff, cannot in justice to our farmers, our labor and our manufacturers be postponed. I shall therefore request a special session of congress for the consideration of these two questions. I shall deal with each of them upon the assembly of the congress.

Mandates From Election. It appears to me that the more important further mandates from the recent election were the maintenance of the integrity of the constitution; the vigorous enforcement of the laws; the continuance of economy in public expenditures; the continued regulation of business to prevent domination in the community; the denial of ownership of operation of business by the government in competition with its citizens; the avoidance of policies which would involve us in the controversies of foreign nations; the more effective reorganization of the departments of the federal government; the expansion of public works; and the promotion of welfare activities affecting education and the home.

These were the more tangible determinations of the election, but beyond them was the confidence and belief of the people that we would not neglect the support of the embedded ideals and aspirations of America. These ideals and aspirations are the touchstones upon which the day to day administration and legislative acts of government must be tested. More than this, the government must so far as lies within its proper powers, give leadership to the realization of these ideals and to the fruition of these aspirations. No one can adequately reduce these things of the spirit to phrases or to a catalogue of definitions. We do know what the attainments of these ideals should be: The preservation of self-government and its full foundations in local government; the perfection of justice whether in economic or in social fields; the maintenance of ordered liberty; the denial of domination by any group or class; the building up and preservation of equality of opportunity; the stimulation of initiative and individuality; absolute integrity in public affairs; the choice of officials for fitness to office; the direction of economic progress toward prosperity and the further lessening of poverty; the freedom of public opinion; the sustaining of education and of the advancement of knowledge; the growth of religious spirit and the tolerance of all faiths; the strengthening of the home; the advancement of peace.

There is no short road to the realization of these aspirations. Ours is a progressive people, but with a determination that progress must be based upon the foundation of experience. Ill-considered remedies for our faults bring only penalties after them. But if we hold the faith of the men in our history past who created these ideals, we shall leave them heightened and strengthened for our children.

Conclusion. This is not the time and place for extended discussion. The questions before our country are problems of progress to higher standards; they are not the problems of degeneration. They demand thought and they serve to quicken the conscience and enlist our sense of responsibility for their settlement. And that responsibility rests upon you, my countrymen, as much as upon those of us who have been selected for office. I have no doubt that you will rise to the occasion. Ours is a land rich in resources; stimulating in its glorious beauty; filled with millions of happy homes; blessed with comfort and opportunity

Hoover's Inaugural Address Bristles With Terse Epigrams

Washington, March 4.—(AP)—President Hoover's inaugural address bristled with epigrammatic statements. Here are some of them: "We are steadily building a new race—a new civilization great in its own attainments."

"Rigid and expeditious justice is the first safeguard of freedom, the basis of all ordered liberty, the vital force of progress."

"There would be little traffic in illegal liquor if only criminals patronized it."

"The duty of citizens to support the laws is co-equal with the duty of their government to enforce the laws which exist."

"Our whole system of self-government will crumble either if officials elect what laws they will enforce or citizens elect what laws they will support."

"Those who have a true understanding of America know that we have no desire for territorial expansion for economic or other domination of other peoples."

"We not only desire peace with the world, but to see peace maintained throughout the world."

"Peace can be contributed to by respect for our ability in defense."

"The animosities of elections should have no place in our government for government must concern itself alone with the common weal."

"Ill-considered remedies for our faults bring only penalties after them."

"Ours is a land rich in resources; stimulating in its glorious beauty; filled with millions of happy homes; blessed with comfort and opportunity."

"No country is more loved by its people. I have an abiding faith in their capacity, integrity and high purpose."

effect high purposes in public welfare. It is an advance toward the highest conception of self-government. Self-government does not and should not imply the use of political agencies alone. Progress is born of cooperation in the community—not from governmental restraints. The government should assist and encourage these movements of collective self help.

Business has, by cooperation, made great progress in the advancement of service, in stability, in regularity of employment and in the correction of its own abuses. Such progress, however, can continue only so long as business manifests its respect for law.

There is an equally important field of cooperation by the federal government with the multitude of agencies, state, municipal and private, in the systematic development of those processes which directly affect public health, recreation, education and the home. We have need further to perfect the means by which government can be adapted to human service.

Education. Although education is primarily a responsibility of the states and local communities, and rightly so, yet the nation as a whole is vitally concerned in its development everywhere to the highest standards and to complete universality. Self-government can succeed only through an instructed electorate. Our objective is not simply to overcome illiteracy. The nation has marched far beyond that. The more complex the problems of the nation become, the greater is the need for more and more advanced instruction. Moreover, as our numbers increase and as our life expands with science and invention, we must discover more and more leaders from every walk of life. We cannot hope to succeed in directing this increasingly complex civilization unless we can draw all the talent of leadership from the whole people. One civilization after another has been wrecked upon the attempt to secure sufficient leadership from a single group or class. If we would prevent the growth of class distinctions and would constantly refresh our leadership with the ideals of our people, we must draw constantly from the general mass. The full opportunity for every boy and girl to rise through the selective processes of education can alone secure to us this leadership.

Public Health. In public health the discoveries of science have opened a new era. Many sections of our country and many groups of our citizens suffer from diseases the eradication of which are mere matters of administration and moderate expenditure. Public health service should be as fully organized and as universally incorporated into our governmental system as is public health in the private sector. It is a splendid field in reduction of suffering and promotion of human happiness.

World Peace. The United States fully accepts the profound truth that our own progress, prosperity and peace are interwoven with the progress, prosperity and peace of all humanity. The world is at peace. The dangers to continuation of this peace today are largely the fear and suspicion which still haunt the nations. No suspicion or fear can be rightly directed toward our country.

Those who have a true understanding of America know that we have no desire for territorial expansion, for economic or other domination of other peoples. Such purposes are repugnant to the American people. Superior officials seem to find no destiny for our abounding increase in population, in wealth and power except that of imperialism. They fail to see that the American people are engaged in the building for themselves of a new economic system, a new social system, a new political system—all of which are characterized by aspirations of freedom of opportunity and thereby are the negation of imperialism. They fail to realize that because of our abounding prosperity our youth are pressing more and more into institutions of learning; that our people are seeking a larger vision through art, literature, science and travel; that they are moving toward stronger moral and spiritual life—that from these things our sympathies are broadening beyond the bounds of our nation and race toward their true expression in a real brotherhood of man. They fail to see that the idealism of America will lead it to no narrow or selfish channel, but inspire it to do its full share as a nation toward the advancement of civilization. It will do that not by mere declaration but by taking a practical part in supporting all useful international undertakings.

We not only desire peace with the world, but to see peace maintained throughout the world. We wish to advance the reign of justice and reason toward the extinction of force.

The recent treaty for the renunciation of war as an instrument of national policy sets an advanced standard in our conception of the relations of nations. Its acceptance should pave the way to greater limitation of armament, the offer of which we sincerely extend to the world. But its full realization also implies a greater and greater perfection in the instrumentalities for pacific settlement of controversies between nations. In the creation and use of these instrumentalities we should support every sound method of conciliation, arbitration and judicial settlement. American statesmen were among the first to propose and they have constantly urged upon the world the establishment of a tribunal for the settlement of controversies of a justiciable character. The permanent court of international justice in its major purpose is thus peculiarly identified with American ideals and with American statesmanship. No more potent instrumentality for this purpose has ever been conceived and no other is practicable of establishment.

The reservations placed upon our adherence should not be misinterpreted. The United States seeks by these reservations no special privilege or advantage, but only to clarify its position in advisory opinions and other matters which are subsidiary to the major purpose of the court. The way should, and I believe will, be found by which we may take our proper place in a movement so fundamental to the progress of peace.

Our people have determined that we should make no political engagements such as membership in the League of Nations, which may commit us in advance as a nation to become involved in the settlements of controversies between other countries. They adhere to the belief that the independence of America from such obligations increases its ability and availability for service in all fields of human progress.

I have lately returned from a journey among our sister republics of the hemisphere. I have received unbounded hospitality and courtesy as their expression of friendliness to our country. We are held by particular bonds of sympathy and comradery with them. They are each of them building a racial character and a culture which is an impressive contribution to human progress. We wish only for the maintenance of their independence, the growth of their stability and their prosperity. While we have had wars in the western hemisphere yet on the whole the record is in encouraging contrast with that of other parts of the world. Fortunately of the new world is largely free from the inheritance of centuries of distrust which have so troubled the old world. We should keep it so.

Al Smith Smacks Golf Ball While Rival Takes Oath

Palm Beach, Fla., March 4.—(AP)—As Herbert Hoover laid his hand upon the Bible and swore the oath which made him president of the United States his opponent in the November election, Alfred E. Smith, former New York governor, swung a well timed driver against a gutta-percha pellet on the 17th tee of the Everglades Golf club here, watched the white sphere go sailing down the fairway—and chuckled.

Mr. Smith awakened late this morning at his hotel, where he and Mrs. Smith and a party of friends have been for nearly a month. After a leisurely breakfast, Mr. Smith and three members of his party motored to the golf course.

At exactly 12:45 o'clock, as President Hoover raised his hand to take the oath of office, Mr. Smith leaned mightily against a golf ball, watched it soar through the air for one of his best shots of the season, and laughed happily as William F. Kenny, of New York, congratulated him on the stroke.

Tonight at 11:55 o'clock the Smith party boarded the private car of Mr. Kenny and left for the north.

A brief stop will be made at Washington Wednesday morning, another at a point in Delaware, and Mr. Smith will arrive back on the sidewalks of New York about 10 o'clock.

Mr. Smith did not send a telegram of congratulation to President Hoover today. He contemplated such action this morning. "But since I saw Mr. Hoover less than two weeks ago and personally extended my congratulations and felicitations, I did not care to bother him with a telegram," he declared.

TWO INJURED BY AUTO

Negro Driver of Machine Placed Under Arrest.

Struck down by a negro's automobile after it overran a red light stop signal and sent numerous pedestrians scurrying to a safe retreat at Broad and Marietta streets Monday afternoon, according to police, Mrs. J. W. Bently, 975 Beecher street, and her six-year-old daughter, Marion, were treated at Grady hospital for bruises and lacerations about the body. John Moore, negro, 327 Buchanan street, driver of the machine, was arrested on a charge of reckless driving by W. V. Nash and Walter Goode, emergency patrolmen.

MAN WHO SOUGHT CELL IN PRISON ENDS 35-DAY TERM

"The best laid plans, etc." C. T. Ethridge, for one, is doubtless more than willing to subscribe to the truth of this famous saying of an equally famous Scotch bard, following his release from jail Monday after serving 35 days for "malicious mischief," having been charged with deliberately breaking a window in the local postoffice, solely, it is said, for the purpose of gaining entrance into the federal penitentiary here.

A 35-day term in the Fulton county tower was as close as he got. "That's enough," said Judge Sibley Monday.

Gus Streetman was fined $80 in United States court Monday on a plea of guilty to transporting whisky in violation of the national prohibition act. The case had been transferred here from Gainesville.

HOGS ARE HAPPY AS TOM RETURNS TO FORMER POST

Tom McGee, 35, is on his way back out to the River camp to see that the hogs are properly fed every day for the next ten months. Tom pleaded guilty Monday before Judge Jesse Wood in city criminal court on a charge of vagrancy, and asked for two ten months sentences. Judge Wood expressed regret at his inability to grant Tom's wish for the 20 months, but split the difference with Tom and called it ten months at the River Camp. "Trouble is," Tom said, "that your sentences ain't long enough."

Tom told Judge Wood that he had served four sentences at the River Camp, and that no one else could feed the hogs just like he could, hog feeding being a real science. And then, too, Tom reminded Judge Wood, Claude Mills is warden out at the River Camp, and Warden Mills is a regular fellow.

DEATH OF J. A. ROSE IS PROBED BY POLICE

Despite Coroner's Verdict, Theory Advanced That Man Was Killed by Robbers.

Though a coroner's jury Monday returned a verdict that J. Albert Rose, 40-year-old paperhanger, met accidental death Sunday beneath the wheels of a train, the police Monday night were working on the theory that Rose had been robbed and tossed from the Peters street bridge.

Detectives working on the case said that they had discovered bruises about Rose's head which indicated that he had been slugged. When the man's severed body was found by employees of the Central of Georgia railroad near the Terminal station Sunday, only three cents were in the pockets of his clothing. The detectives definitely established Monday that early Sunday afternoon Rose was known to have had about $140 in his possession. The police are centering their efforts on tracing the $140 but thus far have been unable to locate anyone who said they saw Rose dispose of it. The inquest conducted Monday by Coroner Paul Donohoe failed to bring out any additional facts regarding the fatality and the jury returned a verdict of accidental death.

The body of Rose is at the Sam R. Greenberg Undertaking company awaiting funeral arrangements.

GEORGE CARSWELL WILL TELL LIONS OF NEED OF ROADS

"Good Roads and What They Mean to Georgia" will be the subject of an address to be given by George Carswell, secretary of state, at 12:30 o'clock today at the weekly meeting of the Atlanta Lions club at the Henry Grady hotel. Judge R. C. Bell, of the Georgia court of appeals, will be the guest of honor. An elaborate musical program will be given under direction of Mrs. Norton Sullivan.

GOODRICH RUBBER OFFICIAL PRAISES SOUTH'S PROGRESS

The marked advancement of the industrial south in recent years is directly traceable to its willingness to turn profits into improved facilities, according to T. G. Goodrich, first vice president of the B. F. Goodrich Rubber company, who is in Atlanta in connection with the award of contracts for a proposed $4,000,000 addition to the Marsha Mills in Thomaston. Plans for the addition call for the erection of approximately 500 homes for mill operatives on a 1,000-acre tract of land, which will be known as "Silvertown" after the product of the Goodrich company. The improvement program also includes the installation of new spindles in the mill, which will increase the present number to 30,000. Construction will be started within the near future, Mr. Goodrich said.

PARDON FOR BITTING, EX-BANKER, IS SOUGHT

Plea for Summerville Man Is Based on Ruling in Case of W. D. Manley.

Basing their plea on the ruling recently made by the United States court in the case of W. D. Manley, attorneys representing N. K. Bitting, convicted in Chattooga county on a charge of violating the fraudulent insolvency statute in connection with the failure of a bank at Summerville, filed an application for a pardon for Bitting before the state prison commission Monday.

Bitting was convicted under the statute which the United States supreme court held was unconstitutional in the Manley case. He was sentenced to serve three years in the state prison and has served more than a year.

Attorney G. E. Maddox, of Rome, representing Bitting, read to the commission a copy of the decision of the court in the Manley case. He contended that Bitting should be released on the ground that he was convicted in violation of a statute which has been ruled unconstitutional by the highest court in the country. Prior to the decision in the Manley case notice had been filed with the commission that a pardon would be sought for Bitting. The application for clemency was made at the trial judge, the solicitor, the grand jury which indicted Bitting and the jury which convicted him. He is 63 years old and was cashier of the Bank of Summerville when it failed several years ago. The prison commission took the case under advisement.

BENNETT ANNOUNCES LEASE ON PEACHTREE

Plans for elaborate remodeling of the Peck building, three-story triangular structure that occupies the prominent site bounded by Peachtree, Pryor and Houston streets, were disclosed Monday with an announcement by Claude S. Bennett, diamond merchant, that he had leased the building as a new location for his business. The transaction involved a lease of $400,000 in aggregate rentals over a period of years. Mr. Bennett will use the southern portion of the ground floor, having the entire frontage on Houston street as well as a large portion of the Peachtree and Pryor street frontages, for location of his diamond store. The pointed part of the building at the north will be subleased.

Mr. Bennett is now located at 118 Alabama street, S. W. In announcing the leasing of a new location Tuesday he pointed out that his business has expanded steadily since 1925, outgrowing the present quarters and necessitating removal to larger store space.

The Peck building is located in one of the city's most extensive office building districts. It is opposite the Candler building, well as just across the street from the 21-story Rhodes-Haverty building when the latter structure is completed. The structure has a frontage of a little more than 100 feet on Peachtree and approximately the same frontage on Pryor. The base of the triangle is on Houston street, with a width of 45 feet. The front of the building is occupied by a chain cigar store, while in the south portion the former Selman's drug store, now one of the Lane drug stores, is located. It is this space that will be remodeled for new quarters of the Bennett company. The lease on the building is for a term of between 15 and 18 years. It was negotiated through A. R. Cates, of the Adams-Cates company, as agents.

Stephens College Girls Brave Rain To See Memorial

About 175 awed girl students of Stephens college, Columbia, Mo., stood at the base of Stone mountain Monday in a drizzling rain and heard the story of the world-famous granite peak. It was part of their course of instruction, for Dr. James W. Wood, president of the college, is strongly of the belief that his students can learn far more through travel than through books.

President Wood and other officials of the school headed a party of 175 students of the college which arrived in Atlanta for a one-day stay Monday morning. Though the weather was inclement and prospects for an enjoyable day in Atlanta dim the girls insisted on carrying out their prearranged program and after breakfast at the Ansley hotel were taken to Stone mountain by motor. Their route led past Georgia Tech, in which a number of the girls had expressed deep interest.

After the trip to Stone mountain the girls were given luncheon at the Biltmore. The party left Atlanta at 2 o'clock in the afternoon for Asheville, N. C., the last stop on their tour. The trip is the fourth annual educational tour of Stephens students. The party was accompanied by several members of the college faculty and a number of mothers of the students. Each student upon completion of the trip was required to give a report of her observations. These reports will be read in the classrooms in order that girls who were unable to make the trip also will benefit from the tour.

FORGERY, FRAUD TOTALING $9,500 CHARGED TO LEROY

Indictments charging forgery of three promissory notes for $1,000 each, and the defrauding of a woman out of $8,500 by false representation, were returned Monday by the Fulton grand jury against H. J. LeRoy, alias J. W. Farrell. LeRoy is alleged to have forged the names of the Atlanta Baking company, the Stone Baking company, and the Zakas Baking company to promissory notes on October 25, 1927. The notes were passed on Mrs. Bessie Collins, of Bankhead avenue, according to the indictments. The defendant is charged in a misdemeanor indictment with cheating and swindling Mrs. Collins out of $8,500 on September 22, 1927, by representing that there were two carloads of "distress flour" or flour not accepted by the firm to whom it was sent, and that he had the opportunity of making a large and quick profit by buying the flour and reselling it in smaller quantities.

Fulenwider Here To Prepare Way For Stock Season

Preparing the way for the opening of a distinguished stock company, headed by Beverly Bayne and composed of numerous outstanding players selected from current Broadway productions, Leslie Fulenwider, the producer, arrived in Atlanta Monday and announced that the season at the Atlanta theater would be inaugurated March 18 with "This Thing Called Love."

In engaging Miss Bayne to play leads with his company, Mr. Fulenwider is carrying out his announced intention of giving Atlanta theatergoers a well-balanced organization in which the charm of established players is adroitly combined with the best and most individual actors of the rising generation. While Miss Bayne has been known primarily as a screen star, with a record of having made over 500 motion pictures, her reputation has not been restricted alone to the silent drama. She has the distinction of being the only prominent actress who has achieved unique success in vaudeville, in Broadway productions and in stock companies, as well as in pictures. The box office at the Atlanta theater will be opened today in readiness to receive season reservations.

Swollen Streams Render Many Roads Impassable

Swollen streams and overflowing rivers in central and south Georgia are causing much damage to roads and even greater damage is threatened, according to information obtained at the state highway department Monday, but every possible effort is being made by the department to repair damages and keep traffic open on main arteries, according to John N. Holder, chairman. Crews of men were sent to Echocoon creek, a few miles below Macon, to repair a washout 300 feet long on the paved highway between Macon and Jacksonville but this stretch again is threatened, according to dispatches received Monday afternoon.

With the Ocmulgee river rising at the rate of one foot an hour as reported at Macon; with the Flint river, the Ogeechee river, the Ocmulgee river and the Altamaha river and their tributaries all steadily rising, grave danger to highways was threatened in almost the entire central Georgia and

Says Friends Are All Talking About Wonderful Change Since Taking Sargon.

MRS. H. D. COOPER.

other medicines and treatments failed.

"When I started this treatment I weighed 97 pounds and I was in a terribly run-down condition. I was extremely weak, and had suffered with what I was told was gall bladder trouble and indigestion so long that I had just about given up all hope of ever being well again.

"For years I had been so nervous, and so restless at nights, that I got very little sleep, and this went a long way towards breaking down my strength and energy.

"For a long time I almost lived on butter-milk, and when I tried to eat any kind of solid foods, I would have such violent pains in my stomach, such splitting headaches, and my nervousness would increase to such an extent, that I was simply in misery. My back and limbs ached so all the time, that I had very little peace either day or night.

"During these 14 years, I just don't know how many different medicines and treatments I tried, but I do know that none of them gave me anything but temporary relief, and very little of that.

"Then, I decided to try the Sargon treatment, and this changed my entire outlook on life. I commenced to mend almost immediately. My appetite came back. Late anything I wanted to eat, and nothing disagreed with me. And how well and strong I commenced to feel—better than I had felt in years and years. My nervousness left me entirely. I enjoyed delightful, restful sleep. I was strong, and full of new energy. Even my eyesight was strengthened. And then, when all the pains left my back and limbs, I felt like a new woman.

"Sargon Soft Mass Pills stimulated my liver and my constipation and headaches are ended. I can never praise this wonderful new treatment too highly."

"The above remarkable statement was recently made by Mrs. H. D. Cooper, well-known and highly esteemed resident of 755 Melrose street, N. W., this city.

"The Sargon representative is at Jacobs' main store, 8 and 8 1/2 Marietta street, where he is meeting the public and explaining the merits of the medicine. Sargon and Sargon Soft Mass Pills may also be obtained at the other Jacobs stores all over Atlanta. —(adv.)

the coastal plain section of the state Monday.

Working Night and Day. Officers of district engineers of the highway department are working day and night to keep the main highways open for traffic. It was announced at the highway department.

Reports from Waycross received Monday were to the effect that the situation between Macon and Waycross is improving and that traffic probably would be resumed today. The only impassable point on this route has been the Echocoon creek section. The road from Waycross to Alma and Ocala by way of Nichols and Douglas is rough and badly washed out but is easily passable without danger of cars getting stuck, according to the Waycross report.

All roads in the Savannah division with one exception, are open, according to the report of the district engineer. The Ogeechee river, however, is now two feet higher than the high water level reached in 1928 and is running over the top of some of the roads. The only road not open in this division runs from Milledgeville to Swainsboro and between Statesboro and Milledgeville.

Higher Levels Seen. Indications point to still higher levels for the Altamaha river and the Savannah river, according to the report of division engineer J. Friedman, of the Savannah division. The road from Savannah to Macon by way of Metter and Dublin is still open for traffic, it was reported.

The road from Macon south to Valdosta and Tifton is open except where it is washed out at Echocoon creek. Reports from Macon stated that the detour around the Echocoon washout is now impassable and that much of the new fill made there by the highway department crews washed out a second time. The road through Dublin and Swainsboro to the south is still open, according to the Macon report.

At Bainbridge, factory operators and farmers living in the Flint river valley were moving back materials and cattle Monday in anticipation of even higher waters on the river. Roads out of Bainbridge to the west are still open. DeKalb county is "practically dry," according to the report from Bainbridge and it will take a large amount of flood water to do material damage according to the report.

South of Perry. Late reports received Monday night were to the effect that highway No. 7 from Perry south to Valdosta is in good condition and that bus lines are making average schedule time, according to Remer Jones, superintendent of the Georgia-Florida coach line. North of Perry the highway is blocked, according to telephone messages from Perry.

The highway south to Valdosta leading into Florida is paved and open. The detour in certain portions of Turner county, north of Valdosta, is reported to be in good condition, slowing down traffic only to a slight degree.

SHIPPEY AND MERRITT FACE TRIAL MARCH 12

W. L. Shippey, slayer of Hall Davis, will face trial for murder Tuesday, March 12, before Judge Edgar E. Pomeroy, while A. E. Merritt and J. L. Hamilton, charged with criminal assault and robbery, will be tried on the same day before Judge John D. Humphries, according to the calendar announced Monday by Solicitor General John A. Boykin.

The date for the trial of W. D. Manley, former president of the Bankers' Trust company, whose sentence of 9 to 10 years under a conviction for fraudulent bank insolvency was set aside by the United States supreme court, is under consideration by Mr. Boykin, and will be decided as soon as the calendar is cleared of a number of cases, it was said. Shippey, a wholesale grocery clerk, is charged with killing Davis, West End automobile dealer, on December 6. The defendant claimed at the time of his arrest that Davis had broken up his home. Davis was shot when he called at Shippey's place of employment to keep an appointment with him, it was said. Merritt was indicted by the grand jury in its investigation of a series of attacks upon women and robberies on the north side. He is under a number of criminal assault and robbery indictments, while Hamilton is under one criminal assault indictment and one robbery indictment.

"There are professional criminals, and they are all awake, and it behooves us to study them and their methods," Judge Pomeroy said. "Stories in the newspapers lead us to believe that crime is increasing. My experience has led me to believe that it is not increasing as a whole but crimes among youths are appalling."

ATLANTA STORES SHOW GAIN IN SALES

FIGURES made public by the Federal Reserve Bank show that Atlanta stores enjoyed a marked increase in business in January over the same month of the previous year.

When the Atlanta and Lowry National Bank was chartered, in 1865, the entire retail sales of Atlanta were not equal to those of a large Atlanta store today.

Little capital was required in those days, and banking service was simple and limited.

Growing with the city, the Atlanta and Lowry has always been identified with the development of mercantile business, and today, as in 1865, it is at the service of Atlanta merchants.

Judge Fuchs Starts Race As Manager

Braves Will Go to Wire Under Brand-New Manager; Prospects Are Good.

BY BRIAN BELL.
Associated Press Sports Writer.
St. Petersburg, Fla., March 4.—(AP) Emil Fuchs, former New York judge, will sit this summer on a strange bench and with him will rest the hopes of the Boston Braves. "The Judge," as he is called by everyone in baseball, will find this open-air court quite different from the ones he knew in New York.

He cannot issue a citation for contempt of court against fans disagreeing with his decisions and few, if any, of the verdicts returned against his club will be subject to appeal. The head of the Boston forces in the national league is conducting one of the most daring experiments in baseball. He has stepped from the sheltered confines of his executive office to the field itself and although he has not donned a baseball uniform to replace the judicial robe of other days, he is no less a judge.

Like Uncle Robby.
There have been other presidents who were managers, too, but almost without exception they were like Wilbert Robinson, of the Brooklyn, former major league player.

Manager Fuchs' best baseball playing was done for the orange Athletic club. A combination of circumstances including an injury to his arm and service in the Spanish-American war thwarted his ambition to make baseball his profession.

In seven years' connection with the Braves he has developed into a close student of the game as it is played by experts. A part of the time he sat at the feet of a baseball Gamaliel, the immortal Christy Mathewson.

At first glance it would seem impossible for a club president to lay aside a pen to pick up a bat with any hope of success, but the mild-mannered Fuchs, with a ready, pleasant smile and sympathy for all mankind, certainly has a chance to get away with it. He has accomplished one-third of his task already by selling himself as a manager to his players. Now he has to convince the fans and opposition clubs.

He will be assisted by two stalwarts of the game, Johnny Evers and Hank Gowdy, co-heroes in the 1914 four-game world series triumph of the Braves over the Athletics, but President Fuchs is Manager Fuchs just the same. He proposes to give his ideas a thorough trial and if he is wrong he says he will be the first to admit.

Baseball Men.

On the playing field will be found at least two men who know a lot of the game. The diminutive Rabbit Maraville, another 1914 Braves star, who since then has seen the baseball world, and George Sisler, former manager of the St. Louis Browns, will be very active in explaining the intricacies of "the judge." Gowdy may join the playing forces for 50 games or so.

Sisler has rounded into superb form and gives every indication of being the Sisler of old, when he was the American league's leading batsman and most valuable player. Gowdy does not seem to have changed in 15 years.

Mat Program At Auditorium On Thursday

Earl M. McGroarty, the new promoter who Thursday night at the city auditorium will attempt to revive wrestling here, is an experienced promoter, according to word from Memphis, where McGroarty formerly lived. McGroarty has had experience as a boxing manager, promoter of boxing and wrestling shows and also is well known in the south as a referee of shows. He has now established his home in Atlanta and expresses confidence that he will restore Atlanta fans' interest in mat shows.

"I know that the game is dead here now," McGroarty explained, "but wrestling is booming all over the country now and I am confident that Atlanta fans will turn out for the right kind of show. I am only going to bring nationally-known heavyweights here and all I ask is that the fans give me a chance to prove that I mean business."

For his opening show Thursday night McGroarty has matched Mike Romano, the ferocious Italian grappler, with Gene Ledue, noted French mat star. They are heavyweights and McGroarty believes that they will give the fans all they want in the way of thrills and excitement.

Romano and Ledue will meet in a two-hour bout, which will be decided by the best two out of three falls. In addition to that scrap McGroarty will offer another special match, which will be limited to one hour and will be settled by the best two out of three falls. For the time being McGroarty is making his headquarters at the Wilnot hotel.

Conference Basketball.

THE penultimate evening of the 1929 Southern conference basketball tournament established several things in the mind of this humble purveyor of published pearls.

Basketball as it usually blooms and blossoms in the winter months of each year has never exactly been the sweetheart of the sporting world. Other sports have taken the principal chairs on the piazza of the average fan. If basketball were always played like it was played last evening at the city auditorium the other sports might have to play the well-known second fiddle at times.

EVEN the virile he-man who love to sit about the stove and tell how all the nerve in the world is wrapped up in the football field; how all the gentlemen who boast hirsute adornment on their upper torso leave basketball to the weaker brothers, should have seen those games last night.

The first contest featuring the Wolfpack of North Carolina State and Maroons of Ole Mississippi was "even closer than the score would indicate," to quote the country correspondent. The score was 34-32 and should have been a draw. It seems a crying shame to let any team lose in a game like that. Both should win.

WOLVES are fighting animals and when they bite they bite in a big way.

The Wolfpack of N. C. State proved that conclusively last evening. It trailed the twins of Oxford with rare consistency until just a few short moments before the game ended then it took a new lease on life and never let go. The score must have been tied and untied more than a table full of wedding presents in that last few minutes. Everybody lost track of the score just watching those little fellows from down in the valley and the big fellows from up yonder tear into each other.

That first game was enough for even the most exacting fans, but the second game was just as bad or just as good, depending on the degree of respect one has for his nerves. The Blue Devils of Duke university proved they were worth nearly all the mooney in the world by eliminating a most tenacious Bulldog by a score of 43-37.

THAT score indicates an advantage of six points for the Million Dollar laddies from the town of cigarettes. But scores don't mean much in this game. They just indicate who won, that's all. They don't tell how the Bulldogs made the Devils go to get that six-point margin. That final score doesn't tell how Georgia, with about five minutes left to play, was 10 points down to the Carolinas and tied the score in half that time, nor does it tell anything at all about the fighting that took place in those last two minutes.

Once again the fact was demonstrated that free throws mean something in a basketball game. The man who toes the mark must get his average just as much as the man who rips into the hole and slips the peep shot into the hoop. Georgia made but three out of 11 free throws and Duke made five out of seven. If Georgia's average had been the same as Duke's from the free line the game might have been won.

Oh yes, to be sure, we must pick a winner for tonight. Let it be the Blue Devils. We call Duke just to score one for the aristocracy.

Negro Fight Card Famous Golf Pros Stopped by Rain Invade Fort Myers

Rain, caused postponement last night of the boxing card at the Elks Colored club and the bouts will be staged Monday night, March 11. Promoters announced from the ring that they would return money paid for tickets but the fans voted to hold their tickets until Monday. Free exhibition bouts were given instead of the regular card.

Rankin Attracts McGraw's Eye

San Antonio, Texas, March 4.—(AP) Clifford Rankin (Pat) Crawford, handy man from Society Hill, N. C., is attracting attention at the training camp of the New York Giants.

He made quite a bit as a first baseman with the Toledo club, of the American association last year and John McGraw, among others, seems to think the 27-year-old graduate of Davidson college is ready for the big time.

He batted .347 in the American association and critics think that he will beat nearly as hard even against major league pitching.

Young Talent Is Asheville's Hope in Sally

Asheville, N. C., March 4.—(AP)

Only half of the baseball squad that won the South Atlantic association pennant for Asheville in 1928 will be back in harness when spring training begins here March 15.

Seven of the veterans of the flag-winning crew have gone up during winter time marketing, while the rest of the squad has been held over to defend Aunt Sally's bunting for the Tourists.

Several of the veterans were barred away to make room for youngsters who will become necessary factors in operating the club under the circuit's recently adopted rookie rule, which provides that each club carry on its roster five players who are once only beneath class "B" ball.

President Dan W. Hill and Manager Ray Kennedy have seen to it that a sufficient quantity of rookies will report, but their quality remains to be determined by the spring tests.

Two pitchers, Bud Shauer, right hander, and Harry Smythe, southpaw, are the only twirlers salvaged from the championship staff. Bill Harris, who led the circuit last season from the mound, has gone to Dallas; Joe Marly, the wild speed merchant sent here near the middle of the season by the New York Yankees, has been shipped out to the Hollywood organization of the Pacific Coast league, and Martie Baylin and Joe Heving, both right handers, were pulled out to the Memphis Chick of the Southern association. Joe Brugg, former Charlotte player, was released outright.

Shorste is the yawning void troubling the Tourist bosses. That spot was admirably protected in 1928 by Joe Chapman, who is in the expected to perform for St. Paul. But a few days ago the Tourists purchased Dominick Payton from Syracuse and if his press agent is correct, he'll shine Chapman.

Danielson, a semi-pro, also has been signed and will be a candidate for a short first post.

Mule Watson will be unopposed for his third base position. Jack O'Reilly, another veteran, will be back for a try at his place at the keystone but Bill Gore, a Birmingham semi-pro, also will be a candidate for the position. Doc Weber, first base pitcher, will have stiff competition to retain his place from Bobby Hips and Bill Carrier. Hips is a "class man," having performed for the Chattanooga Lookouts after finishing at Furman university and playing a short time in 1927 with the Tourist's Carrier, a free agent, is comparatively unknown.

Center Is Open.

The right and left flanks of the outfield in all likelihood again will be filled by holdovers, but the great open space of center will demand a plug. Center field was handled last year by Dusty Cooke, who goes along with Chapman this season to St. Paul. Al Green, a veteran, will be expected to replace Cooke, but Green, a veteran, is expected to return to their outfield posts.

The Tourists have employed Roy Pascher, center field, and Joe Givens, right-handed pitcher, from the Waco Texas league club in a no-cash exchange for Roy Luebbe, veteran backstop of the club. Luebbe will again work back of the plate in a relief role, but must yet sign a regular receiver. Jack Sparrow, Pennsylvania semi-pro, is the only prospect so far.

Five new pitchers are to report. They are Reginald Grabowski, brother of the Yankee catcher; Carl Thomas, from St. Paul; John Allen, of the Eastern Carolina league; revenue, from Waco, and Buck Greene, a rookie.

Vance, McWeeny Worry Uncle Rob

Clearwater, Fla., March 4.—(AP)

Wilbert Robinson is having so much trouble trying to get Dazy Vance and Doug McWeeny to sign on the dotted line that he hasn't much time to devote to the rest of the Brooklyn Robins.

Dazy and his manager have had one conference at which there were indications that the strike-out king will be in the fold within a few days. The McWeeny case, however, seems to present more difficulties and immediately broke down and admitted that he'd like to get a little more money.

Greensboro Signs Driskill, Slugger

Lynchburg, Va., March 4.—(AP)—Carl Driskill, hard-hitting outfielder with the Glass High school here for four years, has been signed by Greensboro, N. C., in the Piedmont league for a trial. Driskill is to report there about March 25, it was announced here today.

Giants Hold Double Drill; Myer Reports

Lena Blackburne Drives His Men Hard; Other Camps Put in Busy Day.

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Southern sunshine has had major time to get in its work and major league baseball squads training in Dixie Monday started a week of more and harder work.

John McGraw's Giants, pasturing over at San Antonio, Texas, found one work-out insufficient and went back to the diamond later in the day for another lengthy drill.

Terry and Roush both were yet absent but no worry was felt as they have already signed. The Giant boss indicated, Benton would pitch three innings Wednesday in a practice game against Texas university at Austin.

All-Day Session.

Lena Blackburne, chief of the Chicago White Sox, ordered an all-day session at Dallas, with lunch served on the field. A vaudeville-regular game featured in the afternoon.

Buddy Myer, who not so long ago went to Boston but was bought back, agreeably surprised Walter Johnson at Tampa, Fla., when he reported ready to work in the next day or so.

Myer has played shortstop and third base in the majors.

The Phillies were struggling into camp at Winter Haven, Fla., with John Greene, Don Hurst, Sweetland and Fresno Thompson the latest additions. They went through their first work-out this morning.

Manager Shotton expressed satisfaction with the way the squad is shaping up. More of the Phillies are expected within the next day or so with the entire squad to be on hand by Thursday.

Jack Hendricks divided his Cincinnati Redlegs for a practice game during the day at Orlando with rookie pitchers doing the flinging. Harlan Pyle, Ray Harrington, Joseph Smith, Paul Zahner, Maria Gudat and Orlan Johnson took mound turns in the five-inning session.

Red Infield Speedy.

The Red infield showed speed in the opening inning when Carl Stebbins and Kelly worked a double play which was followed by a double killing, from Lucas to Shiell. Lucas was at shortstop.

Jackie Ray, pitcher, Kelly and Pittenger, shortstop, were in uniform for the first time.

Work, the word that spelled with clubbing the day at Orlando with the arrival of the first contingent of infielders and gardeners. Manager Hendricks laid heavy stress on the hitting game, keeping the boys swinging for an hour at a time, at the plate, in the cages and in his games.

Even the sliding pits were worked. The first infield work of the season saw Bottomley on first, Selph on second, Doracher on short and High on third. Frisch, Gilbert and Haney were absent.

Red Sox Work Out.

The Red Sox landed at their Bradenton training quarters this morning, and had their first workout completed before the noon hour. The ranks of the ranks of private citizens Bill Carrigan's hopefuls, about 40 of them, presented full strength on the first work day, with the exception of Ira Flagstead, veteran outfielder, and Benny Borgman, rookie infielder, who are expected in a few days.

The Browns at West Palm Beach have only their usual early morning workout, but Dan Howley warned them of the morrow. At that time the remainder of the crew, including outfielders and outfielders, were in camp, and the first hard practice day of the spring is in prospect. Phil Ball, owner-president, will come in tomorrow's contingent.

Walter Selah, veteran catcher, appeared in uniform today for the first time this season. The champion holdout man of the squad arrived yesterday.

ATHLETIC REGULARS TROUPE YANNIGANS.

Fort Myers, Fla., March 4.—(United News)—The Yannisians of the Philadelphia Athletics were again overwhelmed by the regulars today at the first work-out. The regulars, led by Simmons leading the assault with a homer, two singles and a double. The score was 19 to 4. It was the second successive victory of the seniors over their juvenile mates.

Batteries: Regulars—Kornell, Bolan, Quinn, Gabe, Deisenroth and Cebanone. Yannisians—Jesse, Shores, Zanka, Walbert, Breckenridge and Olowacki.

SQUADS ON COAST WORKING HARD.

San Francisco, March 4.—(AP)—The managers of the three major league baseball clubs in training out here paid no attention to "blue Monday." Instead, their features lighted up with broad grins.

Bucky Harris, whose Detroit Tigers are encamped at Phoenix, Ariz., had probably the most gratifying news of the day, that his $75,000 outfielder, Roy Johnson, has decided to report for work at once.

Johnson, purchased from the San Francisco Seals of the Coast league, had been holding out for a part of the money paid for him. The Tiger roster is now complete and will hold two workouts daily.

The Pittsburgh Pirates had a busy day at their Paso Robles, Calif., quarters. Although battling against most of the routine today, Manager Donie Bush was most pleased with the fact that Lee Meadows, the spectacular pitcher, appeared ready for a "come-back."

The progress of the Chicago Cubs, holding forth at Santa Catalina Island, Calif., was reflected in a statement by Manager Joe McCarthy. "There is but little to correct after the two exhibition games of Saturday and Sunday," he said. "A little more work on the hitting end and the team is in order, but there is plenty of time for that yet."

Rogers Hornsby had his batting eye sharpened today, every one of his traveling to the outer reaches of the field.

Princeton Golf Star Second in Tourney

Pinehurst, N. C., March 4.—(AP)—Eugene Homans, Princeton golf star, was second in a tournament of the Carolina Archers association here today. J. R. Riker, of New York, took first place.

Leading scores: J. R. Riker, New York, 46; Eugene Homans, Englewood, N. J., 42; Hubert O'Brien, Detroit, 42; W. C. Riker, New York, 38; J. S. McCormick, Pittsburgh, 36; Miss Amy Barber, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., 36; Miss Ethel Sturdevant, New York, 36.

Jackets Open Grid Work Today

Rain or shine, probably rain, the overall score of Georgia Tech's football prospects will start spring football practice today. Coach Alexander announced yesterday.

In the event of rain the squad will be issued uniforms and will be given indoor drill, it was stated.

Some of the veterans on last season's squad will not report at once as they are now taken up with baseball work. Coach Alexander says these men will divide their time between the two sports.

Many freshmen who will be eligible next season will be out and Coach Alexander hopes to whip them into shape and get a line on their abilities before closing the pre-season workouts. No scrimmaging will be held for several weeks, he stated.

Beach Delays Speed Trials By Britisher

Daytona Beach, Fla., March 4.—(AP)

All except the beach was in readiness tonight for the international speed trials, tentatively set for March 6, when Major H. O. D. Segrave, British racing driver, will attempt to wrest the land speed record for England.

After looking the beach over today, the Britisher said it might be another week before ridges in the long natural runway have been sufficiently ironed out to make high speed trials safe.

Meanwhile, Segrave worked with his speedboat, Miss England, while J. M. White, of Philadelphia, owner of the triple, which holds the present world's record, prepared his car for an onslaught against his own time of 207.55 miles per hour.

Miss England skinned over the water of Halifax river today at a 74-mile per hour clip, but Segrave was not satisfied with the performance. The Britter's propeller in the boat had too great a pitch and will be substituted with another. The change was expected to be made tomorrow and the Britter then hoped to determine whether his boat could outspeed the record held by the Wood brothers.

Fight Permission Denied at Norfolk

Norfolk, Va., March 4.—(AP)—Judge A. R. Hancock, of the circuit court here, today refused to grant an injunction to Barry McCormack, New York boxing promoter, who sought a court order to restrain officers from interfering with boxing bouts scheduled to be held in a Norfolk theater next Friday night.

The promoter's attorney plans to carry the petition before a supreme court judge tomorrow and said tonight that if necessary he would carry the matter to every member of the supreme court. Failing then to obtain the order, the attorney said, the fights will be held anyway.

Amateur and semi-professional bouts have been held in Norfolk for several years but the recent appearance of Young Stribling, Georgia prizefighter, at a theater here, brought court orders to restrain officers from interfering with boxing bouts scheduled to be held in a Norfolk theater next Friday night.

McCormack based his petition for an injunction on the ground that the property rights were involved in the proposed matches.

Juveniles Take Fifth Place in Pin Tourney

Chicago, March 4.—(AP)—"The Kids," a squad of juveniles from Chicago, went into fifth place in the team event of the American Bowling Congress tourney here tonight with a score of 2,097.

There were no other changes among the leaders. N. Keller, of Chicago, still topping the singles list with 623; J. R. Riker, of New York, the doubles with 1,133, and Penick Grocers the five-men, with 2,753.

Piles Disappear

No Cutting or Salves Needed

External treatments seldom banish Piles. Nor does cutting remove the cause. The cause is inside—bad circulation. The blood is stagnant, the veins flabby.

The bowel walls are weak, the parts almost dead. To quickly and safely rid yourself of piles you must free the circulation—send a fresh current through stagnant pools. Internal treatment is the one safe method. Ointments and cutting won't do it.

J. S. Leonard, M. D., a specialist, set at work some years ago to find a real internal remedy for piles. He succeeded. He named his prescription: HEM-ROID, and tried it in 1,000 cases before he was satisfied. Now HEM-ROID is sold by druggists everywhere under guarantee. It is a harmless tablet, easy to take, and can always be found at Jacobs' drug stores, who will gladly refund the purchase price to any dissatisfied customer.—(adv.)

ATTORNEY OF CITY TO AID IN FIGHT FOR BIG MEMORIAL

City Attorney James L. Mayson was instructed Monday afternoon by vote of city council to assist the Stone Mountain Monumental association in the fight of that body to retain the escarp on which the association is engaged in carving the civil war memorial.

The paper was offered by Councilman Wiley L. Moore, of the seventh ward, chairman of the finance committee.

Owners of the mountain have begun suit, claiming that the association has failed to complete the memorial in the time allowed in agreements and that title should revert to them.

COLDS MAY DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Old Folks Say Doctor Caldwell was Right

The basis of treating sickness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell of Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice, known to druggists and the public since 1892 as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

Then, the treatment of constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions that result from constipation was entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which is a combination of senna and other mild laxative herbs, with pepsin.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you, and the better for the general health of all. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong drugs?

Children coughing?

In the stillness of the night, the sound of little bodies racked by coughing strikes terror to the hearts of mothers.

Don't wait until the symptoms get serious. Better still, don't even wait for symptoms of any kind. But after every unusual exposure, or if children come home with wet clothes or wet feet, give them GROVE'S BROMO QUININE in the smaller doses prescribed in the directions with each box. Children do not fuss about taking the tiny tablets, as they do about bad-tasting laxatives. Yet they gently clear the digestive tract, tone the system, and build up the little body's defenses. So children's colds, and parents' too, are snuffed away by their mere threat. Or are thrown off quickly. ... For your own sake, emphasize GROVE'S, when asking for GROVE'S BROMO QUININE. Price 30c.

RISING STREAMS THREATEN GEORGIA

lessen the danger around Albany, Newton and West Bainbridge, points which the high water of last week is just now reaching.

At Albany, thirty-five small residences in the flats along the river, but not in the city proper, had been inundated to a point where their porches were being lapped by waves. Eight families had been forced to that section by city employees. A few plants were building dams against the high water.

Roads in the vicinity of Milledgeville, on the Oconee, Monday were again reported in danger of going out, and the repaired washouts on the Dixie highway, main travel artery to Florida, about 12 miles south of Macon, were slipping again. Detours were in use, but not approved by the highway department.

Von Hermann Monday night said the gulf disturbance which brought the added rain was central over eastern Alabama, and, as a consequence, Alabama, Georgia, and smaller rivers would rise again. Word from Birmingham was that Brewton, small south Alabama town which suffered slight inundation by flood waters, probably would have more high water this year, but that no serious consequences were feared.

Other south Alabama points reported a renewal of flood conditions that wrought heavy damage to crops in lowlands last year.

FORECASTS RAPID RISE OF ALABAMA RIVER

Montgomery, Ala., March 4.—(AP)—P. H. Smyth, Montgomery meteorologist, today forecast a rapid rise in the Alabama river and its tributaries during the next three days following a recurrence of torrential rains over south Alabama watersheds last night.

Rain measuring 2.1 inches fell here overnight and rainfall at Selma, Ala., some 50 miles further downstream, was 3.20, the weather bureau said.

The Alabama river at Selma reached a crest of 45.7 feet, ten feet above flood stage, yesterday, following a gradual swell as a result of the severe storms earlier last week. The river had fallen but one tenth of an inch at 9 a. m. and was expected to start rising again tonight.

Rainfall last night was heavy over the Coosa, Alabama, Tallapoosa and Cahaba watersheds, the meteorologist said, and all of the rivers were expected to swell rapidly.

WEATHER DELAYS PERRY ROAD REPAIRS

John N. Holder, chairman of the state highway board, said today that weather had delayed repairs to the Macon-Perry paved highway at the Echawonree creek bridge approach where the road was washed out last week. The chairman said the road would probably be in passable condition by tonight.

Mr. Holder has dispatched B. C. Milner, assistant state highway engineer, to the scene of this washout to assist the division engineers in repairing a 400-foot break in the long fill.

Another washout, 200 feet long, in the approach to the steel bridge over the Flint river on the Americus-Venue road, Mr. Holder said, could not be repaired until the water recedes.

PLAN OF ANNEXATION IS OFFERED BY WHITE

Councilman's Proposal Would Almost Double City's Present Area.

Atlanta's area will be doubled if the charter revision committee of city council and the Georgia legislature pass favorably on a proposed charter amendment presented to city council Monday by Councilman John A. White.

At present there are 24 square miles in Atlanta, and Mr. White's proposal would add 33 more. The Buckhead intermediate territory, College Park, East Point, Hapeville and intermediate sections would be annexed if Mr. White's plan is accepted. The measure went to the charter revision committee for approval.

A resolution by Alderman Oscar H. Williamson, of the ninth ward, to prevent annexation of any of the Druid Hills section, without a favorable referendum vote from that area also was sent to the same committee. Mayor I. N. Ragsdale, under a council resolution, was authorized to appoint a citizens' committee of 50 to assist in bringing the proposed area into the city. The group will act as steering committee and will be composed of citizens in the area which it is proposed to annex.

COOLIDGE SIGNS 53 BILLS; TEN UNSIGNED

Washington, March 4.—(AP)—Al though confronted by fewer last-minute bills than usual at the end of a session of congress, President Coolidge today signed 53 measures and applied a checkmark to 10 more which died for lack of his signature.

The bills approved included the first and second deficiency appropriation measures amounting together to approximately $212,000,000, and the interior department appropriation bill carrying about $28,500,000. The bills disapproved included that for civil service retirement, providing for increased annuities for government employees and a bill to establish a national park at Duquitch, Ark.

The first deficiency bill was the one which caused much controversy in congress on account of the amendment of Senator Harless, democrat, Georgia, to appropriate $24,000,000 additional for prohibition enforcement.

Among the outstanding measures approved by President Coolidge today was one extending the authority of the radio commission until next January 1. That body would have authorized by the president on March 16, had the bill not been approved, and the commission's work reverted to the commerce department.

Another measure approved authorized appropriation of $50,000 to cooperate with Latin American countries in the construction of a system of inter-American highways. Others settled a civil war claim of the state of Nevada; established a joint commission on insular reorganization; made legal entry into the United States by alien equivalents to a few under certain circumstances and established Teton National park in Wyoming.

Three of the approved bills were signed at the capitol immediately before the close of the congress and the beginning of President Hoover's inaugural ceremonies.

Student at Georgia Tech Given Carnegie Hero Medal

ROGERSON REWARDED FOR SAVING GIRL'S LIFE

Laurie S. Rogerson, 21, of Andrews, S. C., a member of the sophomore class at Georgia Tech, has been awarded the Carnegie hero fund medal for bravery in saving Miss Sara J. Reeves, 20, of Lancaster, S. C., from drowning on the morning of July 13, 1927, it was revealed in Atlanta Monday.

Rogerson is going to Georgia Tech under the cooperative plan, attending college one month and working one month as an apprentice in the railroad shops of the N. C. & St. L. at Chattanooga. In this manner he is enabled to earn sufficient money to pay for his education.

According to Rogerson, who is working this month in Chattanooga, he and his family were enjoying a swimming party at Pauley's island, 10 miles northeast of Georgetown, S. C., Miss Reeves was in bathing at the same time, a member of another party of swimmers.

"I had left the water and gone perhaps 300 feet up the beach, to lay on the sand and rest, for I had been in the water for several hours and was tired," stated Rogerson. "While resting I heard a scream, several screams, and at first I thought it was some of the children who were yelling and playing, when I left the water."

"I found out later that it was my grandmother calling me. I realized then that something serious was happening, so I ran as fast as I could to see what the trouble was."

Leaping into the water, Rogerson swam to aid the drowning young woman, only to see her go down for the first time.

"I thought I would never reach her," said Rogerson, "and the undertow was so strong that I was very nearly exhausted when I did reach her."

Rogerson reached the drowning girl just as she had started on the last and fatal plunge beneath the waters that were drawing her exhausted body further and further away from her grief-stricken friends on the beach.

"I hardly remember the rest," stated Rogerson, "for I was half unconscious when they dragged us from the water as I reached the beach with Miss Reeves as limp as a dead body in my arms. I just know that I prayed God to let me get her back safe to her friends."

S. P. Clemons, of Nashville, and K. D. Senn, of Timmonsville, S. C., presented Rogerson's name to the Carnegie hero fund and through their efforts and those of Miss Reeves' family the bronze Carnegie medal was secured for him. With the medal goes a sum not to exceed $1,000, which may be used for educational purposes by the receiver.

Beauty's Boudoir

BY MARIE LA ROQUE.

PEROXIDE SHOULD BE USED WITH CARE.

I spoke yesterday of one or two simple drugs useful in the toilet and have a few more to mention today.

Ordinary borax powder ought always to be on hand. It is one of the best of the cheap water softeners and used moderately does no harm to skin or hair. When used in the shampoo water the hair should of course always be rinsed in clear water. Used moderately borax is soothing to most skins and is therefore better than ammonia to use in water in which brushes and combs are to be washed since it does not irritate the hands. Moreover it is slightly antiseptic. Where the water is hard a little borax may always be added to the bath to induce free lathering of the soap. A solution of borax and water is sometimes found helpful in the treatment of eczema.

Peroxide is kept on hand to be used as an antiseptic in many households and some doctors advise using peroxide and water for washing the skin when bruised or cut to prevent infection. On the other hand there are skin specialists who definitely advise against peroxide for this purpose. One goes so far as to say that it should be used on the skin only as a bleach and then only when fresh and in decidedly dilute solution.

So to be on the safe side I would not recommend peroxide as one of your toilet or cosmetic standbys. Buy a little fresh when you need it and then do not use it on broken skin. So long as there is any prejudice against it it is better to use some other antiseptic concerning which there is no question.

Alcohol is a good mild antiseptic and should be kept on hand for a number of purposes. Since you cannot get pure grain alcohol without a doctor's prescription any of the slightly medicated toilet alcohols are a good substitute. It is well to rub the skin with it before pricking a blister, lancing a small boil or removing a splinter. The needle or tweezers should also be cleansed with alcohol. Alcohol is irritating, however, and is therefore not so good as boric acid for use on bruised surfaces. Used diluted with water it is usually beneficial in cases of acne—that is ordinary pimples.

In response to numerous requests we have prepared a little circular describing treatment for acne—that is ordinary pimples. It is based on the advice and information obtained by specialists and I am sure will prove helpful to any one suffering from this troublesome disorder. Send me your stamped, self-addressed envelope and I will send it to you at once. Address Marie La Roque, care The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga. (Copyright, 1929, for The Constitution.)

GUARD THE DANGER LINE

The most important reason for cleaning your teeth is to neutralize the acids that cause decay and gum irritations. These acids form in pits on the grinding surfaces of your teeth and at the Danger Line, where teeth and gums meet. And no tooth-brush can reach all these pits and crevices. That is why millions of people are turning to Squibb's Dental Cream, made with 50 per cent Squibb's Milk of Magnesia. Milk of Magnesia positively prevents acids from harming the teeth or gums. For when you brush your teeth with Squibb's Dental Cream it neutralizes the acids at the Danger Line. And, of course, Squibb's Dental Cream cleans beautifully. It is harmless if swallowed. 40 cents a large tube.

Now You Can Reduce 2 to 4 Lbs. in a night

Eat what you please
Wear what you please
Do what you please
Take no risky medicine

Thousands of smart women have found this easy way to take off 2 to 4 pounds once or twice a week. These women take refreshing Fayro baths in the privacy of their own homes. Fayro is the concentrate of the same natural mineral salts that make effective the waters of twenty-two hot springs of America, England and Continental Europe. For years the spas and hot springs bathing resorts have been the retreat of fair women and well-to-do men. Excess weight has been removed, skins have been made more lovely, bodies more shapely and minds brighter.

The Hot Springs Are Now Brought to You

A study of the analyses of the active ingredients of the water from twenty-two of the most famous springs have taught us the secret of their effectiveness. You can now have all these benefits in your own bath. Merely put Fayro into your hot bath. It dissolves rapidly. You will notice and enjoy the pungent fragrance of its balsam oils and clean salts!

Then, Fayro, by opening your pores and stimulating perspiration forces lazy body cells to sweat out surplus fat and bodily poisons. Add Fayro to your bath at night and immediately you will lose from 2 to 4 pounds in an easy, refreshing and absolutely harmless manner.

Your physician will tell you that Fayro is certain to do the work and that it is absolutely harmless.

Fayro will refresh you and help your body throw off worn-out fat and bodily poisons. Your skin will be clearer and smoother. You will sleep better after your Fayro bath and awaken feeling as though you had enjoyed a week's vacation.

Lose Weight Where You Most Want To

Fayro reduces weight generally, but you can also concentrate its effects on abdomen, hips, legs, ankles, chin or any part of the body you may wish.

Results Are Immediate

Weigh yourself before and after your Fayro bath. You will find you have lost from 2 to 4 pounds. And a few nights later when you again add Fayro to your bath, you will once more reduce your weight. Soon you will be the correct weight for your height. No need to deny yourself food you really want. No need for violent exercise. No need for drugs or medicines. Merely a refreshing Fayro bath in the privacy of your own home.

Try Fayro at Our Risk

The price of Fayro is $1.00 a package. Inside each package you get an interesting booklet, "Health and Open Pores."

If each beautiful bath of Fayro does not reduce you a weight from 2 to 4 pounds, we will refund your money without a question. You risk nothing.

BURGESS CHILDREN'S STORIES

THE STRANGERS DECIDE TO STAY.

BY THORNTON W. BURGESS.

Who knows he is well off is wise to be content; there comfort lies. —Old Mother Nature.

"Who are you talking to?" asked Nanny Meadow Mouse, as she poked her head out of a little round hole in the snow in the Old Orchard just back of where Danny Meadow Mouse was sitting. "Then she saw the two strangers overhead. 'Oh,' she exclaimed in her funny, squeaky voice. 'Who are these folks?'"

"They are two strangers who have come down to the Old Orchard to stay until winter is over," said Danny. "That is, they are going to stay if they can find enough to eat. They'll do that all right. Farmer Brown's Boy will see to that."

"Who is Farmer Brown's Boy?" asked one of the strangers.

"He lives over in that house," replied Danny, "and all winter long he keeps food out here for all the feathered folks and some others. No one goes hungry around Farmer Brown's. By the way, you haven't told me who you are."

"Oh, excuse me," squeaked Danny. "I am Danny Meadow Mouse and this is Nanny Meadow Mouse."

"I am pleased to meet you," said the stranger politely. "People call me Wanderer—Wanderer the Evening Grosbeak—and this is Mrs. Wanderer."

"Welcome to the Old Orchard," squeaked Danny. "You—you don't happen to be fond of Meadow Mice, do you?" He added this somewhat anxiously.

Wanderer chuckled. "If you mean to eat, I should say not," said he. "We are seed eaters. Then we like a few bugs as a change of fare now and then. So you see we can almost

Fat Comes at Forty

Science has found the reason why people grow fat. That reason lies largely in a defective gland. To some that trouble comes in early years, but to most people after 40.

A certain gland, which largely controls nutrition, becomes weak. Then food, which should go into fuel and energy, deposits itself in fat.

No starvation, no over-work can rectify the condition. Both are harmful. The right remedy is to activate an under-active gland. Physicians the world over now employ it.

That is the method employed in Marmola's prescription tablets. They are based on scientific research on the causes of excess fat. A famous medical laboratory perfected them. People have used them for more than 20 years—millions of boxes of them. You can see the results in every circle—in new youth and beauty, new health and vitality.

Do what your friends are doing. Correct the cause of excess fat. Don't starve, don't over-work. Take four Marmola's tablets daily and watch the delightful results. You must correct the cause.

Do this, because this is the scientific way. Results you get without it cannot last. Do it because multitudes of people all about you have proved its efficiency. Do it now. Every day of delay means that your life is not being lived at its full.

Marmola's prescription tablets are sold by all druggists at $1 per box. If your druggist is out, he will get them at once from his jobber.

DELKS MURDER TRIAL GETS UNDER WAY TODAY

Ludowick, Ga., March 4.—(P)—Attorneys who will defend Mrs. Lulu Delk, 20-year-old widow charged with murder in connection with the supposed poisoning of her husband, were announced today on the eve of the opening of her trial late tomorrow in superior court here.

She will be represented by M. Price, R. L. Dawson and Arley Darsey. Mrs. Delk was charged with having conspired with J. D. Stafford, Jr., son of a former Liberty county sheriff, to poison her husband, Stoney Delk, Stafford, who was said to have been living at the Delk home at the time, was indicted with the widow after an investigation conducted at the request of townspeople who expressed the opinion that Delk had not died of natural causes.

He probably will be tried after the case against Mrs. Delk is disposed of. Since their arrest the widow has been held in jail, but Stafford has been at liberty on bail of $5,000.

Mental Defectives' Sterilization Law To Be Introduced

Milledgeville, Ga., March 4.—(Special.)—Sterilization of mental defectives as the subject matter of a law will be proposed to the next legislature, it became known here this week after a session of the trustees of the Georgia State sanatorium, in which they had gone on record as advocating such a law.

The trustees passed resolutions requesting the legislature to consider the enactment of such a measure. It is pointed out that there are similar laws in Kansas and California, and that these laws have resulted in an appreciable lessening of insanity in those states.

The law, if enacted, would probably be designed to provide also for the sterilization of habitual criminals incarcerated in the Georgia State Prison farm here.

While such a law will do much for the improvement of future generations, it is opposed by many on the theory that it is a violation of the constitution.

It is hinted here by those who oppose such a law, that the enactment will not be made without opposition, and it is practically certain to meet with the opposition of the families of the insane patients.

THE MEDBURY FORT MURDER

By GEORGE LIMNELLIUS

SYNOPSIS.
Major Hugh Preece of the Royal Army Medical Corps has just been transferred from Bath to Fort Medbury, which is not far from London. He is about to leave his office for the day to take his wife and children out riding when Lieut. Levan is announced and he has to stay to examine him. The lieutenant is suffering from a mild nasal disorder and the major prescribes for him. After the young officer leaves Major Preece remembers that he has seen him before and recalls the occasion. The visit puts the major in a reminiscent frame of mind.

INSTALLMENT II.

AN OLD LOVE AFFAIR.
In a house, Prunella Lake was ten years or more in advance of her time. Her type, small chiseled features, pale skin, and slim boyish figure, was to become fashionable in the post-war period. She had even cut her dark hair short, thus anticipating the Eton crop by twelve years.

"How the deuce to meet her?" Preece wondered. Meet her he must; yet he detested the obvious course of sending round his card. His fastidiousness revolted at the idea of employing that banal and vulgar device. The very next night, a Monday, by a most extraordinary stroke of luck, they had met. Preece had been attending the wife of a corporal of horse. After bidding farewell to the grateful corporal, Preece had decided to walk back to his quarters. He had only a general sense of direction to guide him. Presently he debouched on a long straight road. The rows of houses consisted of two storied flats inhabited by clerks and the lesser professional class. Preece, in his rare excursions in relief of what he ruefully owned was an almost overpowering physical urge, had visited similar flats in the neighborhood of King's Cross.

A hansom cab jingled down the empty street and stopped on the opposite side of the road near a lamp post. A slim, dark coated figure jumped out.

"Ere! Wot the bloody 'ell's this?" The slim figure had run up the garden path and now stood in the shadow of the porch.

"Nah then, miss! This ain't enuff fur 'arf pas' one in the bloody mornin'!"

No reply. The sound of a key being hurriedly pushed into a lock.

"Ere! You bilkin' little b—!" The cabman began to scramble off his elevated perch. A faint scream came from the direction of the porch. Preece decided to wait for him to interfere. He crossed the porch.

"Now then, cabby," he said as the man landed on the pavement, "what's the matter?"

The figure in the porch advanced half way down the path. It gave him half a crown from Waterloo. Surely that's enough?"

Preece stared. He could see her small face clearly in the lamplight. Prunella Lake beyond doubt. He turned to the cabman, a big, burly fellow now distinctly inclined to be aggressive. Preece thought quickly. It would be the devil to have a row with the cabman. Besides, the fellow looked a fairly tough customer. He took a sovereign from his pocket and holding it so that the cabman could see it, but the girl could not, he spoke sharply:

"Now, cabby, clear out! That's enough, or I'll knock you down." The threat was accompanied by a broad wink in the direction of his palm.

"Ere! Ere! Ere!" The cabman had begun on a rising note of surprised indignation.

Preece had quietly passed the sovereign into his hand, whispering: "Here, see! Take the quid and buzz off! Can't you see I want to know the lady?"

"Oh, I see!" Comprehension dawned on the cabman's face. With a Cockney's adroitness, he played up: "Don't go for it to 'it me," he whined, "an' 'want, lily! He swung himself up to his box with a final subdued chuckle and a "Good-night, Corporal!"

"Not war, perhaps, but how sublime," Preece quoted to himself, as he turned towards the girl.

"Thank you so much." Her voice was low and held thrilling tones. "Won't you come in for a few minutes?"

He remembered every second of that first meeting. Her gurgle of amusement when he had crashed into the umbrella stand in the dark passage and how she had caught his hand to avert a similar catastrophe on the landing. They had sat in the small, ornate parlor with its astonishing collection of photographs, each one handily autographed, "Your always, Douglas Wallace," "Every thing, Gypsy."

"Bell" and "Toujours a Toi, Marguerite de Ponceau." They talked in low murmurs "so as not to disturb mother." In the little hall, again, her pale moth's face lifted to his: his lips closed, gently, tenderly, on hers. He was outside swinging along at a tremendous pace, his nostrils still carrying the faint, intoxicating scent of wood violets, violently, deliciously happy, deeply in love.

Preece sat down in his chair and, taking out his case, lit a cigarette. He had been in love with Prunella, hadn't he? He supposed so. His first genuine love affair? A slightly bitter smile twisted his lips. Had she loved him? Well . . . impossible to say! Still, she had been extremely kind to him. She knew hosts of rich young loafers, hunters of the stage door, ready, hats in hand, to entertain her expensively. But during that summer, two years before the great war, they had spent all their leisure time together. Daylong excursions there had been to Richmond park, or Kew, by bus; or, farther afield by train to Sevenoaks and the New Forest. Sometimes on a wet afternoon they would sit handclasp in the dim security of one of the newly opened cinematographs.

What did it matter whether she had cared or not. Preece himself had since, got over it, and he had always known that, fundamentally, she was—hard; that she would, in the end, inevitably take the safe, the more expeditious path.

The first autumn after he had met Prunella, he had been ordered on a term of foreign service to west Africa. His last night in London he had determined should not be cramped by considerations of economy. Instead of a cheap Soho restaurant, they had dined in the quietest, most magnificent of the Louise Seize room at the Ritz hotel. Prunella looked radiant. The slim white beauty of her arms and neck, her supple figure and vital, animated face beneath the dark bronze hair, attracted more than one envious glance from other visitors. Preece felt that pleasing sense of masculine assurance lent by the knowledge of being in the company of a supremely desirable woman in a public place. Her sleek head with its clean, severe lines contrasted favorably with the fussy chapeau of the time.

Prunella glowed happily at him across the white tablecloth, with its pink shaded lamps. The champagne had seemed to melt that core of hardness, of inhumanity almost, which Preece discerned lay ultimately behind Prunella's every action. His hand touched hers beneath the tablecloth.

"Prunella."

"Hugh!" Her mouth shaped itself deliciously in pronouncing his name into a sort of O.

"You're smiling, why?" he had asked. "That inscrutable smile of hers! How often had he asked himself what it meant! A Mona Lisa smile, indeed!"

Major Preece impatiently ground the stub of his half consumed cigarette into an ash tray. The action recalled another incident of that autumn night—of—by—dove!—nearly 15 years ago. Hm! Prunella was 20 at that time, though with characteristic forethought she had already officially advanced the date of her birth by two years. He knew, happened to know, because her mother—a nice, homely little woman—had artlessly informed him. Mrs. Lake normally kept in the background when any of Prunella's young men called for her, but on one occasion she had opened the door to Hugh. Nervously wiping her hands on a linen apron, she had asked him in, and, to Hugh's surprise, followed him into the little, stale smelling front parlor.

DIALOGUE COUPLE AND LASSES WHITE SCORE AT GEORGIA

Sharing honors with the perennially popular Lassies White on the current stage bill at Keith's is a dialogue team styled Summer and Hunt. These entertainers seem to have nothing startling in its originality yet they somehow get across and keep the customers in an uproar for some minutes after their departure. Lassies White is, of course, Lassies White. This time with a few new gags and some very close harmony in the blue mood, but still the same popular entertainer.

Cameo Capers is a dancing act in the usual style, but with a dash of novelty. Chief among its attractions is a very durable young lady, who gets into the tossing around at the hands of a husky partner, and a jazz band who abuses her poor feet in a most amazing manner.

The other act also is in good being the struggles of one W. H. Groh with various and sundry canines. Maybe it's our congenial weakness for purrs but we liked the act immensely just because the dog makes a good cell and seemed to be having such a good time.

Action plenty is offered in "The Godless Girl" under the direction of the famous C. B. DeMille. It's all about prison life and the last few reels depict scenes in a flaming cell house that fairly make one choke with the smoke. Believe it or not they are so realistic that one feels moved to examine one's eyebrows to see if they are singed.

It's a propaganda picture pure and simple, being designed to counteract the effects of atheistic movements.

BILLY ARLINGTON WINS FIRST PLACE ON CAPITOL BILL

Billy Arlington, a fun-maker of ancient vintage, in a comedy act with three sides, won approval on the new vaudeville bill which opened Monday at Keith's Capitol theater. This comedian bears a striking resemblance to the Arlington of the team of Watson, Kelly and Arlington that appeared in the old musical comedy hit "Mr. Jim and I" back in the days when Jake Wells was an Atlanta theater magnate. He has the trombone and all, and most of his act is featured that grand old show. The act is funny through-out and Arlington keeps the crowd in a continuous chuckle of laughter.

Comedy songs and dances with a line of patter are found in the turn of Joe Lane and Pearl Harper. They offer a novel little baseball skit which pleased.

Eight dancing girls and several male dancers appear in "A Bunch of Tricks," a miniature musical comedy revue. Some attractive stage settings are used as a background for this act.

John Gilbert appears in another John Gilbert picture in which he plays the role of John Gilbert disguised this time as a sheik in "Desert Love." Those who like this star probably will enjoy him as much in this as in his preceding offerings.

SCREEN VERSION OF DAVIS STORY WINNER AT RIALTO

"Fugitives," the cinematic version of Richard Harding Davis' famous story, "Exiles," drew applause in a quantity far from parsimonious at the Rialto theater Monday afternoon, despite the theme of the opus, which is other than the oldest thing one can mention.

The movie has to do with one of the world's numerous "innocent chorus girls" who, employed in a night club rendezvous for gamblers, is unjustly accused of the murder of a gang boss and is sentenced to a 10-year stretch up the river, after being prosecuted vigorously by a fledgling state attorney who believed every accused to be guilty.

En route to the prison the condemned one is snatched from her guards by a foreign port for "safe-keeping," until the state's attorney after a time learns there had been some mistake in the charge and she is sent back to the penitentiary one by marrying her.

The vehicle has a galaxy of stars that includes Madge Bellamy, Don Terry, Arthur Stone, Earl Fox and others.

The entertaining bill is completed with an excellent edition of Fox Movietone News and two clever Vitaphone features.

STAGE AND SCREEN OFFERINGS PLEASE HOWARD PATRONS

One of the best programs in a year awaits your approval this week at the Howard. The feature is "The Canary Murder Case," an all-talker that is anything but the caricature that so many of them are. It features William Powell numerous opportunities for splendid acting and he takes worthy advantage of them.

One thing, if nothing else, makes the picture a good one. That is the act of committing the murder, which is so neatly and effectively done by Powell, really now, we shouldn't give it away.

The suave Mr. Powell moves calmly and collectedly in and out of the picture, doing his work as an amateur crime expert and, of course, solving the crime, even though the perpetrator was killed while on his way to confess, in the request of her mother, Mrs. Theresa Rubens, and her husband, Ricardo Cortez, also of the films. The actress was treated at her home until her mother and husband decided her condition permitted her removal to Spadra.
